Testimony pact near

(c) New York Times

Washington — American and South Korean officials are close to an agreement under which Tongsun Park, a key figure in the Korean investigations, would testify in the Dominican Republic and then in U.S. courts, according to sources close to the case.

The sources also said that Park, who has been indicted here for alleged conspiracy and bribery, would be given immunity in return for his truthful testimony.

They said an announcement of the agreement was expected within a week but cautioned that last-minute obstacles in the intricate and delicate negotiations could easily develop.

Press conference set

Washington (AP) — President Carter will hold a news conference Thursday at 9:30 a.m. CST, the White House announced Tuesday.

Book hoarders beware

Traverse City, Mich. (AP) — Book lovers who hang on to overdue tomes from the Traverse City Public Library can now be fined $25 or spend up to 10 days in jial.

The city commission voted Monday to make it a misdemeanor to keep or damage library books.

Robert Olney, city librarian, said the new ordinance was necessary because the library lost $2,500 worth of books between January and August.

Seven die in shelling

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli and Palestinian gunners dueled across the Lebanese border Tuesday in the worst breach of their Sept. 26 truce. Officials said one Israeli and six Lebanese civilians were killed.

Each side accused the other of starting the shelling, which pounded the Israeli coastal resort of Nahariya and at least a dozen Lebanese towns, villages and refugee camps along the border.

Orange Bowl bonds lose

Miami (UPI) — Maurice Ferre won re-election to a third two-year term as Miami's mayor in light voting Tuesday but a $15 million bond issue he backed to refurbish the city's outdated Orange Bowl stadium was defeated by 2-to-1.

Embassy workers tested

Moscow (AP) — Medical tests show that one of every 29 adults at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow suffers from a mysterious blood condition resulting in abnormally high levels of white blood cells, embassy sources said Tuesday.

Washington has accused Soviet authorities of bombarding the embassy with microwave radiation, but embassy officials have said the radiation has nothing to do with the blood counts.

Sewers Ok'd; center nixed

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln's voters spoke distinctly Tuesday — approving $6.8 million worth of storm sewer work and rejecting a $7 million civic center.

The storm sewer bond issue carried by a 63 to 37% margin (13,848 for an 8,037 against). The civic center bond issue was defeated by a slightly wider margin 67% to 33% (14,888 for and 6,965 against). There remained only two disabled and absentee ballots to be counted.

There were two surprises in the special election, slated originally at a cost of $40,000 solely for the civic center issue. The storm sewer bond issue was added as an afterthought when flooding struck in Labor Day rainstroms.

One of the surprises was the margin by which the civic center proposal was defeated. Six months ago voters were indecisive on the issue. It was defeated by a margin of 531 votes.

"The voters spoke well. It's loud and clear," City Council Chairman Dick Baker said of the results. Baker said he doubts whether the proposal will ever again be placed before the voters.

'The voters spoke well. It's loud and clear'.

Councilman Dick Baker

"I was surprised a lot — that it lost by the amount it did," said Art Thompson, executive director of the Civic Center Corporation.

The second surprise was the voter turnout, around 29% (22,141 of about 77,000 eligible voters). Election Commissioner Bill Davidson had been predicting that the turnout would be around 20%, near the alltime low of 19% set in 1959.

The only explanation Davidson could offer was that voters were more interested in the issues than he had expected.

There were a number of explanations offered for the resounding defeat of the civic center.

Councilman Leo Scherer, the only council member to take a stand against the proposal, saw it this way:

"Lincoln voters are too intelligent to be fooled by an unnecessary and expensive civic center proposition that was supported by a special interest group which I feel made a serious mistake by resubmitting the issue to the voters again."

Baker said, "I think it may have been a victim of overkill. I think there was some backlash. People stopped me on the street to tell me 'We told you what we thought the first time."

Another explanation offered by Baker and agreed to as a possibility by State Sen. Steve Fowler, who was hired by the civic center supporters to coordinate campaign strategy, is that voters, faced with two bond issues, made a priority decision after first deciding that they would only vote for one.

The result were a turnaround from the spring election, when 9,778 people voted for the bond of ballots cast on the issue was fewer in the spring than on Tuesday.

The storm sewer issue, which was supported by all city council members and Mayor Helen Boosalis, won despite a hurried campaign with a budget under $1,000.

Senators aim to stay within revenue forecast

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Jerome Warner said Tuesday he believes the Unicameral's Appropriations Committee will keep its 1978-79 budget recommendations within the confines of anticipated revenue from the state's new 1978 tax rates.

"It is reasonable to assume that our budget recommendations will be within those rates," the appropriations chairman noted.

"I think that's the way it will come out."

The State Board of Equalization will set 1978 tax rates at a meeting next Tuesday. If it follows Gov. J. James Exon's recommendations, the state sales tax rate will be reduced from 3½ to 3 percent and the personal income tax rate will be cut from 18 percent to either 17 or 16 percent.

Warner's committee will begin its budget deliberations in earnest this month, more than six weeks before the 1978 Legislature convenes.

The Waverly senator has scheduled 13 days of hearings on state agency budget requests in November and December as the committee gears up for an early start.

The requests of all major agencies except those in education will have been heard before the Unicameral convenes for its short 60-day session.

Warner hopes the quick beginning will allow the committee to send its budget recommendations to the floor by March 1.

"I think we'll be able to move pretty fast," he noted.

During November and December hearings, he said, he wants the committee to construct a list of tentatively approved new or expanded programs for state agencies.

At the same time, the committee will be looking for "expenditures which might be eliminated from current programs," Warner said.

When the Legislature convenes in January, the committee could then go back to its lists to "attach priorities" to new expenditures, he noted.

Capital construction requests will also be heard in the pre-session hearings.

Warner hopes the committee can reach tentative decisions prior to the session on two major construction programs, those within the Department of Correctional Services and those at the Beatrice State Home for the mentally retarded.

"Those are probably the two most important construction programs to be considered," he said.

Most agency construction requests involve only renovation or remodeling of existing buildings, he noted.

Warner said he plans to schedule hearings on the budget request of the University of Nebraska, the largest spender of state general fund money, in late January or early February.

A decision on salary levels for state employees will probably be delayed until about Feb. 1, he said.

The committee may also consider separate legislation to alter salary schedules within the state pay plan.

Pre-session hearings on budget requests will begin Nov. 21.

Here is the tentative schedule:

Nov. 21: Department of Agriculture; Nebraska Political Accountability and Disclosure Commission.

Nov. 22: Department of Labor; Secretary of State; State Historical Society; State Treasurer; State Auditor; Nebraska Investment Council.

Nov. 23: Attorney General; Crime Commission; Public Service Commission.

Nov. 29: Library Commission; Nebraska Arts Council; Mexican-American Commission; Indian Commission; Department of Veterans Affairs; Liquor Control Commission.

Nov. 30: Game and Parks Commission; Department of Public Institutions; Nebraska Drug Commission.

Dec. 1: Department of Public Welfare; Department of Health; State Fire Marshal.

Dec. 2: Commission on Aging; Department of Roads; Department of Water Resources; Department of Environmental Control; Natural Resources Commission; Military Department.

Dec. 5: District Courts; Board of Pardons; Department of Correctional Services.

Dec. 6: Equal Employment Opportunity Commission; Supreme Court; Department of Motor Vehicles; Board of Educational Lands and Funds.

Dec. 7: State Patrol; Department of Revenue; Agricultural Products Industrial Utilization Committee; Department of Administrative Services.

Dec. 12: Department of Administrative Services (continued); Department of Economic Development; Office of Programming and Planning; Commission on the Status of Women.

Dec. 13: Department of Personnel; Joint Merit System Council; Public Employes Retirement Board; Court of Industrial Relations; Workmen's Compensation Court.

Dec. 14: Capital construction budget requests for the University of Nebraska, state colleges and Department of Education.

Western roads closed by snow

Snowfall of up to five inches at Kimball, accompanied by strong winds, descended upon western and parts of central Nebraska Tuesday.

The first major snowstorm of the season closed some schools, filled western motels and forced motorists to abandon stalled cars on Interstate 80.

Eastern Nebraska received rain, topped by 1.60 inches at Geneva, 1.17 at Lincoln, 1.08 at Harbine, 1.02 at Hebron, 1.00 at Beaver Crossing and Verdigre, .99 at Fairbury and .98 at Beatrice.

For a while Tuesday afternoon, the state Department of Roads closed a 56-mile stretch of I-80 from Disney to the Wyoming line when the snow, backed by 45-mile-per-hour winds, caused near zero visibility.

At Kimball, the town's motels and single hotel were filled to capacity by motorists who gave up fighting snow, gusty winds and poor visibility.

Some schools closed early Tuesday and several in the Kimball area didn't open at all Tuesday because of the storm.

Three to four inches of snow fell in northwestern Nebraska in the Chadron, Crawford and Harrison areas. U.S. 20 at Crawford was blocked for a time after two trucks jackknifed on the icy roads.

Although the snow stopped falling in the extreme west by early evening, high winds continued to cause ground blizzards and highways remained icy and snowpacked, officials reported.

The State Patrol said highways Tuesday night were snowpacked in the Imperial, Ainsworth, Valentine, Sidney, Kimball, Chappell, Oshkosh and Big Springs areas.

Sleet was reported in the York area about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday as the snow moved eastward, reaching Kearney late in the afternoon.

Sleet with winds gusting up to 62 miles per hour hampered motorists in the Norfolk area Tuesday night.

At Holdrege, there was a 14-degree temperature drop in one hour as the cold front moved through the area.

Snow began falling in Lincoln shortly before midnight Tuesday, preceded by 1.17 inches of precipitation, according to the National Weather Service office at the Lincoln airport.

The storm was blamed on a cold front that extended from eastern South Dakota across the central parts of Nebraska and Kansas to a low over the Texas Panhandle.

Light snow was forecast for the eastern part of Nebraska Wednesday with much colder temperatures and strong winds. Slowly decreasing cloudiness was predicted for the west with high temperatures mostly in the 30s and lows in the teens.

Carter threatens to veto unfair energy measure

Washington (AP) — President Carter, saying Congress must "resist pressures from a few for special favors," threatened Tuesday night to veto any energy legislation that fails to meet his test for fairness.

In his first nationwide television-radio address in more than six months, Carter appealed for Americans to urge Congress to act on his energy program.

The energy blueprint he outlined for Congress was fair both to consumers and producers and would promote energy conservation while protecting the federal budget "from any unreasonable financial burden," he said.

"These are the three standards by which the final legislation will be judged," Carter said. "I will sign the energy bills only if they meet these tests."

Carter said, "We should reward individuals and companies who discover and produce new oil and gas, but we must not give them huge windfall profits on their existing wells at the expense of the American people."

The televised address to the nation was the second since Carter took office in January. His first broadcast speech last April also was a call for quick action on the nation's energy problems. In that speech, he proposed the energy program that remains stuck in Congress today.

The energy legislation does not represent "a contest of strength between the president and the Congress, nor between the House and the Senate," he said.

It is a test of the nation's strength and will to "acknowledge the threat and meet a serious challenge together," the president said.

Carter, who may need every vote he can muster on the energy issue, had kind words for Congress and, in an apparent effort to counter any impression that he was going over the heads of the legislators, sought to place the public in the role of partners with the Senate and House.

Lobbying in the months-long energy debate has been heavy and Carter noted in his address that "the political pressures are great."

"The choices facing the members of Congress are not easy," he declared. "For them to pass an effective and fair plan, they will need your support and understanding — your support to resist pressures from a few for special favors at the expense of the rest of us, and your understanding that there can be no effective plan without some sacrifice from all of us."

At the same time, the president again criticized some segments of the oil and gas industry, which in a news conference last month he likened to war profiteers seeking "the biggest ripoff in history."

Carter argued that his proposals provide an incentive for new oil production that "would be the highest in the world," and that gas producers would add $2 billion a year to their gross income.

"But some of the oil companies want much more — tens of billions of dollars more. They want greatly increased prices for 'old' oil and gas energy supplies which have already been discovered and are being produced. They want immediate and permanent deregulation of gas prices which would cost consumers $70 billion or more between now and 1985."

In an effort to reduce energy-related problems to human terms, Carter said that "every $5 billion increase in oil imports costs us about 200,000 American jobs."

Then, noting that American farmers are the world's foremost agricultural exporters, he said: "It now takes all the food and fiber that we export in two years to pay for just one year of imported oil — about $45 billion."

He said nearly half of the oil consumed in the United States now is imported, compared to 20 percent a decade ago, and that "unless we act quickly, imports will continue to go up."

Rival diminishes Hope

The Victoria-Transvaal diamond, largest and most valuable gem gift to the Smithsonian Institution since the arrival of the Hope diamond, is on display at the Museum of Natural History in Washington. The pearl-shaped, champagne-colored gem weighs 67.89 carats and is set in a yellow-gold necklace containing 108 diamonds weighing approximately 44.67 carats. The fabled Hope diamond weighs 44.5 carats.

Occupation used as status measure

New York (UPI) — Money and clothes, cars and second homes, blue blood and private clubs are no longer the measure of status in the 1970s, a UCLA sociologist says.

These days it's occupation.

And after spending 10 years collecting studies on prestige, Professor Donald Treiman has come up with a status scale on occupations.

Trieman, associate director of the Institute of Social Science Research, said his scale is based on 85 studies of occupational prestige conducted since World War II in 60 countries. It covers 509 occupations and scores their prestige ratings from 0-100.

Not surprisingly, members of Treiman's own profession — university professors — are tied with physicians at the top of the list with 78 points.

"I think it's no accident that the first thing that somebody asks you at a cocktail party is what do you do," the 36-year-old Treiman said in the November issue of Human Behavior Magazine.

Next highest in Treiman's pecking order are lawyers, with 71 points. Dentists and heads of large business firms rate 70, professional accountants 68, business executives 67, and high school teachers 64.

Veterinarians score 61 and clergymen 60. Persons who live off income property get 57, journalists 55, nurses 54, secretaries, 53 and stewardesses 50.

Real estate agents rate 49, bank tellers 48, farmers 47, construction workers 46, office clerks 43, TV repairmen 42, proofreaders 41, policemen and cabinetmakers 40, soldiers and post office clerks 39.

Receptionists, telephone operators and factory machine operators score 38, followed by automobile salesmen and models at 36, beauticians with 35, and plumbers, undertakers and sales clerks with 34.

Truck drivers get 33 points and cashiers 31. Assembly-line workers and those who live off Social Security, rate 30.

Then there are factory workers with 29, taxi drivers 28, doormen 27, gas station attendants 25, janitors 21, laborers 19, migrant laborers 18.

And those living on public assistances are at the bottom, with 16.

"I argue that in any complex society, the inherent nature of work creates differences in the power exercised by occupations," Treiman said. "Power begets privilege, and power and privilege beget prestige. And so, since the power hierarchy is the same all over, so is the privilege hierarchy, and so is the prestige hierarchy of occupations."

Is that tiny body way out there the 10th planet?

Pasadena, Calif. (AP) — There's something new under the sun after all — a tiny object that scientists said Tuesday may be the 10th planetary member of our solar system.

Astronomer Charles Kowal, who has embarked on a project to map the universe through his powerful 48-inch telescope at California Institute of Technology, noticed the tiny body last week. The object is 300 miles in diameter, one-tenth the size of the smallest known planet, Mercury.

Kowal said at a news conference Tuesday that while the object's orbital pattern and location are exactly those of a planet, "its small size bothers me."

He said his findings will be studied by other astronomers who will then decide if indeed the object is a 10th planet.

If it is, the discovery could tell more about the origin of Earth and the other planets.

Caltech spokesman Dennis Meredith said Monday that Kowal discovered the object as he was using a microscope to look for minute differences in photographs of the heavens taken on consecutive nights.

The object he found is orbiting the sun between Saturn and Uranus on the same plane as all other planets in the solar system. It is 1.5 billion miles from Earth and takes an estimated 115 years to circle the sun.

Saturn and Uranus are the sixth and seventh planets from the sun.

"Kowal is emphatic that he is not ready to call it a planet," said Meredith. "This is up to the fraternity of astronomers to decide. But if it is planet, it is by far the smallest."

He said the final decision as to whether it is a planet — based on such criteria as its mass, its orbit and the effect it has on other bodies 8 will be made by the Smithsonian Astrophysical Laboratory in Cambridge, Mass.

Kowal, who graduated with a bachelor's degree in astronomy from the University of Southern California in 1961, has worked since at Caltech's Hale Observatory.

He discovered the 13th and 14th moons of Jupiter and located 80 supernovas, the brilliant but momentary explosions of dying stars.

Meredith termed Kowal "a very unusual man" because the highest degree he holds is his bachelor's degree from USC. All but one other member of Caltech's astronomy staff have doctorates, he said.

In a recent science journal article about Kowal, Meredith said, one of his former USC professors said of him, "His name will go down in history."

Eric scares Sue Pelza

Foloroft, Pa. (AP) — Sue Pelza is pregnant and scared and won't go home until Eric is found, so her husband is considering a wild pig, chickens or naked women as bait.

Eric, no snake in the grass, is a 3-foot boa constrictor who disappeared two weeks ago from his cage and is believed to be hiding in the cracks under the floor or in the walls.

Everyone tells me that I shouldn't be afraid of it, but I can't help it," said Sue, 23, awaiting her first child.

"I'm almost eight months pregnant and I'm scared that it might make me go into labor if I saw it."

So she's living with her mother, not far from this suburban Philadelphia community, while her steelworker husband, Mike, hunts for Eric, his 5-pound, year-old pet. Mike says Eric is affectionate, but not fun to find.

Although a boa contrictor is not poisonous, it can bite and kills animals by squeezing them. It can live for months without food.

When Eric fled his cage, Sue fled her house and Mike said he misses his wife more than his snake.

Mike advertised for help when his own ploys failed to bring Eric out into the open. He received more than 50 responses.

"One guy said to get a wild pig and let him loose in the house," Pelza said. "Another said to get a couple chickens, and one called and said snakes are attracted to body heat so I should have a few girls run around naked."

Social Security exception upheld

Washington (UPI) — Congress Tuesday won unanimous Supreme Court approval for its generosity to certain Social Security recipients who marry, even though all are not treated equally.

An opinion by Justice John Paul Stevens said general rules are essential if an undertaking as huge as Social Security is to be administered with any degree of efficiency, despite seemingly arbitrary consequences in some individual cases.

For a long time, federal law provided that benefits stop upon marriage of secondary beneficiaries, meaning disabled dependent children, widows, widowers and divorced wives — all of whom depended on a wage-earner covered by Social Security.

Then in 1958 Congress changed the rules to provide that marriage of such persons to those who themselves were eligible for secondary benefits would not stop either income.

The lawmakers explained that marriage to a person who is or will be entitled to old-age insurance may qualify the dependent for a new benefit based on the earnings of the new spouse.

But if the new spouse also is receiving a secondary benefit, both are cut off and ordinarily neither is likely to get a new benefit.

This exception was challenged by John Jobst of Independence, Mo., a cerebral palsy victim who received disabled dependent child benefits after the death of his wage-earner father.

His benefits ceased when he married someone not eligible for seconeary benefits, although his wife suffered from the same disability and could not support them.

U.S. District Judge John Oliver of Kansas City found the change unconstitutionally discriminated against a disabled child in Jobst's situation, compared with one who married another secondary beneficiary.

But Stevens said the general rule terminating secondary benefits upon marriage is unquestionably valid and the 1958 exceptions also are permissible.

Congress could reasonably take one firm step toward the goal of eliminating the hardship caused by the general marriage rule without accomplishing its entire objective in the same piece of legislation, said Stevens.

The Jobsts, now divorced, eventually began receiving $210 a month under the program of supplemental security income for the aged, blind and disabled — only about $20 less than Jobst's child insurance. He had claimed several thousand dollars in back benefits.

Food stamp allotments to increase

Washington (UPI) — The Agriculture Department announced Tuesday food stamp allotments for low-income families will be increased Jan. 1, and households affected by high winter utility bills will get special help.

The department also announced higher income limits for all but one- and two-person households.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman said the new program will boost the monthly allotment for a family of four from $170 to $174, to keep pace with rising food prices.

Ms. Foreman said monthly stamp allotments will increase by at least $2 for all households except single persons.

The monthly net income cutoff for a family of four to be eligible for food stamps will rise from $567 to $580.

The Food Stamp Act requires the Agriculture Department to adjust stamp allotments twice a year in line with price changes as reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Additional sugar import fees requested

Washington (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland asked President Carter Tuesday to impose additional import fees on sugar of up to 4.2 cents a pound to protect a new government price support program.

The president was expected to approve within a day the new two-pronged program to bolster slumping domestic prices that have hurt U.S. sugar producers.

The announcement did not include any recommendation for a change in import quotas, which the administration has steadfastly opposed.

Bergland announced a price support loan program for 1977-crop sugar under which the Commodity Credit Corporation will offer sugar processors loans of 14.24 cents per pound for refined beet sugar and 13.5 cents per pound for cane sugar.

The loans will, in effect, assure farmers those prices even if the domestic market fails to push prices upward.

Bulova profit is $654,000

New York (AP) — Bulova Watch Co. Inc. has reported a net profit of $654,000, or 17 cents per share, on sales of $56.7 million for the second fiscal quarter, compared to a loss of $1.26 million, or 83 cents per share, for the same period a year ago.

Rockies whiten Plains

Associated Press

A fresh series of thunderstorms further swamped the soaked Northeast on Tuesday, while a snowstorm blowing out of the Rocky Mountains dumped the first snow of the season over the Plains. The weather dampened voter turnout in scores of elections.

Two bands of bad weather stretched across much of the nation: a mixture of heavy rain with fog and drizzle extended east from the Great Lakes to New England, while a system of rain turning to snow ran south from the Dakotas to Texas.

Before moving to the northeast Tuesday evening, the storm dumped more than 4½ inches of rain on New York City, while parts of New Jersey received nearly 7 inches of rain from the two-day downpour.

Flooding snarled traffic and commuter travel in the Northeast, and some residents of Staten Island in New York City had to be rescued from flooded homes by boat.

In the West, snow also tied up traffic and downed power lines. Schools were closed in areas of Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado, and two school buses collided at Lakewood, Colo., but no injuries were reported.

Ten inches of snow had fallen at the top of Vail Mountain in the Colorado ski country and another storm was due Tuesday night.

High winds, low ceilings or snow caused airport delays in New York, Chicago and Denver. A storm damaged several small aircraft at Houston International Airport.

Kennedy Townsend baby unnamed

Kathleen Kennedy Townsend gave birth Monday night to an 8 pound, 9 ounce girl, the first member of a new generation of Kennedys.

The girl is the grandchild of Ethel Kennedy, widow of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy.

"She's a very healthy baby," said David Townsend, 29, the father, who assisted in the natural childbirth at their home near Sante Fe, N.M.

Townsend, a member of the faculty of St. Johns College of Santa Fe, said he and his 26-year-old wife hadn't chosen a name for the child.

"We have to get to know her better first," he said. The Townsends had taken classes in preparation for the delivery. The exercises, involving breathing techniques and muscle control, "worked fine," he said. A physician assisted.

Singer Anita Bryant, who successfully campaigned against a gay rights ordinance in Miami, said Tuesday she wants prayer put back into schools.

"I am not anti-anything," Miss Bryant said in an interview with WDBO-TV. "I am pro-God, pro-family, pro-motherhood, pro-life, pro-Bible, pro-morality and especially putting prayer back in school.

"I want to share the truth with the people," said Miss Bryant.

Miss Bryant said she wants her group, Protect America's Children, to help put prayer back into schools.

Salesman crawls through fields

Cedar Rapids, Iowa (UPI) — Ted Fritz, 40, a Beardstown, Ill., salesman who was injured in an auto accident and spent much of the night crawling through northeast Iowa beanfields, was treated for head lacerations and a knee injury Tuesday at St. Luke's Hospital.

Authorities said the ordeal began about 11 p.m. Monday when Fritz, driving in drizzle and heavy fog, apparently took a wrong turn into Backbone State Park and his car slammed into a tree in the heavily wooded area.

A farmer who lived nearby heard the crash, found Fritz inside the car and told him to wait until help could be summoned. When the farmer returned from calling for assistance, Fritz was gone.

State troopers, sheriff's deputies and other persons searched throughout the night in an attempt to locate Fritz.

More than eight hours later, he was brought to St. Luke's by a motorist who had found him wandering along a road. The motorist did not say where he found Fritz — who remembered nothing but wandering across beanfields during the night.

The distance between the park and hospital is more than 40 miles.

Carrier can stay until June

Hamburg, Iowa (AP) — A Hamburg High School senior won't be deported until next June if he keeps his $9-a-week paper route, immigration officials said Tuesday. So Fred Blanford says he may just keep the route.

"If my paper manager can't get anybody to take the paper route, I will keep with it," said Blanford, 20. "I wouldn't like to just leave him like that. If he finds somebody that wants it, I will gladly leave it."

Immigration officials had originally told Blanford, who has been in this country attending high school for more than a year, that he had to give up the route immediately or be deported within two weeks.

But response from an Associated Press story and a call from Sen. John Culver's office apparently got that changed.

"I sent a letter to him telling him he would be permitted to stay until June 30, 1978 to complete his studies and that the employment issue is pertinent," said Lee Hoppes, Omaha office director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"I do not propose to give him any additional time in the United States if he decides he needs it."

Blanford was befriended by the Rev. Charles Kirtley, now the pastor of the First Baptist Church in Hamburg, when he was leading a mission group in Nicaragua a few years ago.

Kirtley invited Blanford to come to the United States to attend school. He received a visa in 1976 and attended Hamburg High School last year as a junior and enrolled again this year.

"I'm not going to disturb him in it till June," Hoppes said. "But if he keeps it to June, it will probably cut him off from any additional time."

Dick Schaffhausen, the Des Moines Register area manager, said he hired Blanford after he was recommended by Kirtley. Schaffhausen said he had searched unsuccessfully for some time for a carrier until he found Sanford.

But the INS said the the employment is unauthorized and that there are undoubtedly many high school boys in the area who may want the job.

Sanford said it won't bother him to have his visa revoked after his graduation next spring since he plans to return home and attempt to find a job as a mechanic.

"I'm really the one that ought to be deported," Kirtley said. "I encouraged him to do it.

"He's a good carrier. One lady says 'Fred is the first paper boy I ever felt like giving a Christmas present to'."

Kirtley said since Sanford's story appeared in newspapers around the country Monday, he has had numerous telephone calls and letters.

"We'e gotten telephone calls from Los Angeles, Valley Forge and other places. We've gotten quite a pile of calls and letters. We call it Freddy's fan mail," Kirtley said.

"One fellow from Los Angeles said he had a paper route when he was young said he learned more from it than anything else in his life."

Sanford said he doesn't really need the job since the Kirtleys provide him with food, clothes and shelter. He said he just took the job as a favor to the area manager last December and then discovered he likes it.

"It's a little pocket money," he said.

Hampton's low-level attack poisons the atmosphere

It is ironic but not particularly surprising that the atmosphere at Lincoln's City Hall is more negative now than it was before the municipal election last spring.

We never did believe that Councilman Joe Hampton's campaign pledge to "end the bickering" at City Hall was in reality one of his top priorities.

He did not "end the bickering;" indeed, he has thoroughly poisoned the air with his attack on Council colleague John Robinson last week.

Hampton, as most Lincolnites now know, said that Robinson had acted like a "nigger." Even the most charitable construction of what happened — that the incident happened after a lengthy and sometimes emotional evening hearing; that Hampton had been the target of a large number of those testifying; that there has been friction between the two for some months; that he has expressed sorrow "for a poor choice of words" — cannot let Hampton off the hook.

For at the bottom line, his post-hearing remarks to Robinson were not what he made them out to be. Hampton's lame excuse was that by "nigger" he meant someone who acted unprofessionally and without integrity. That stretches credibility to the breaking point.

The use of the word Hampton chose to describe his council colleague is an instinctive, belittling derogation of race, not of conduct. It was a despicable slur against Robinson and as Robinson said, "an affront to all black citizens."

Robinson did not accept Hampton's private apology for the remarks, saying he wanted a public apology instead. We can't blame him.

Anyone who doesn't understand Robinson's refusal to warmly accept Hampton's private apology is either ignorant of or insensitive to what has happened during the hundreds of years of race relations in the United States. It is not a situation in which disparaging epithets and grudging apologies can be offered casually and accepted with indifference.

This is a sad time for Lincoln.

Something is happening here that hasn't happened in our memory. Goodwill and cooperation seem to have vanished from the City Council chambers, reminiscent of politics in Omaha. People who would gladly serve the city are being rejected right and left by a majority of council members. Ugly individual attacks, such as Hampton's upon Robinson, become more commonplace. Polarization is more apparent now than it ever was before the politically fraudulent "end the bickering" campaign. And now racial slurs have entered the scene at the government level.

Local politics in this potentially all-American city seem to have regressed to the standard set in yesteryear's Dixie, or that expected of ward politics in Chicago or elsewhere — anywhere but in Lincoln as we knew it.

Politically and in the area of relations among its people, Lincoln faces a murky future. There are few certainties now; one of them is that Hampton, with his unprovoked, low-level attack against Robinson, has reduced his effectiveness as a councilman and his fitness to serve has been thrown into question.

We are hoping that the old spirit of Lincoln re-asserts itself.

Take a dumb pill; be a wizard

Russell Baker

New York — Question: Are you really the Wizard of Oz?

Answer: No. I am the Wizard of Economics, but the two wizardhoods, being dependent on a talent for projecting an illusion of wisdom from a miasma of doubt, are actually interchangeable.

Q: Would you prefer to talk about the Straw Man or the Carter administration?

A: Is there any difference?

Q: I'll ask the questions, thank you. Why are my taxes about to go up?

A: Because Congress has just learned about penicillin.

Q: Nonsense, Wizard. Penicillin has been around more than 30 years. Congress would have learned about it before now.

A: Not at all. Communication is very slow in Washington. It took almost 90 years for Congress to learn that slavery had been abolished.

Q: What does penicillin have to do with my taxes?

A: Thanks to penicillin, almost everybody now lives long enough to collect Social Security. Congress didn't count on penicillin when it invented Social Security, so it didn't worry where it was going to get the money for Social Security payments to all those folks penicillin was going to conduct into their 70s, and 80s, and 90s. Last week Congress heard the system was broke. This week they're preparing some new taxes to patch it up.

Q: Will they be very steep taxes?

A: As the Royal Executioner told the gentleman who was about to be drawn and quartered, you, sir, will know pain.

Q: Aren't there also going to be heavy new taxes on my oil and gas, after the energy bills are passed?

A: As you seem to be a glutton for bad news, yes.

Q: Is there no good news, Mr. Wizard?

A: Of course. The Senate is proposing to reduce your personal share of the new Social Security tax by making your boss pay a lot more than you do.

Q: What's good about that? If the boss pays more taxes, he's got less money to give me a raise to meet the ever rising cost of living. Don't I end up paying the boss's share, too?

A: The Senate proposal is based on the assumption that you're too dumb to know things like that. If you're not, you lose the tax benefit of the Senate plan.

Q: Can't anything be done to save me from these taxes?

A: Of course, and the administration is dedicated to doing it. Its aim is to create more jobs. With more jobs, more people will pay taxes and the individual burden will be reduced.

Q: How do you create more jobs by raising the tax employers have to pay on every job-holder? Won't this encourage employers to hold down the tax bill by holding down the payroll?

A: You don't understand economics. Of course a big rise in the Social Security payroll tax might hold down employment. That is why the President proposes to compensate for raising the Social Security payroll tax by cutting the income tax.

Q: Let's see if I have this right: The government proposes to take from my left pocket and add to my right pocket. Wouldn't it be easier just to leave both pockets alone?

A: You forget that more lucre is needed to keep Social Security afloat. What is returned may not be so great as what is taken away.

Q: Then why doesn't the government take only what it needs from the left pocket and let it go at that, instead of taking too much from the left pocket and then having to put some of it back in the right picket?

A: Because, you see, the President has promised tax reform. With the extra income-tax forms, you'll have to fill out to recover what's due to your right pocket, not to mention all the new forms you'll need to cope with the new credits and deductions in the new energy bill, the President figures you'll finally become angry enough to write a letter to Congress demanding tax reform.

Q: Would that do any good?

A: Does a flea scratch dogs?

Q: Can't you give me something, Wizard, to help me make sense of it all?

A: That, alas, is medicine which does not exist. But here — take two of these dumbness pills every four hours, and it won't hurt so much.

Butz raises warning flag

The farm strike movement appears to be catching on like a grass fire, judging from rallies held in the south and the midlands region over the past week.

Despite a hands-off approach to the proposed withholding action by many older farmers and the agricultural establishment, the movement seems to be picking up support.

But guess who wants to throw a wet blanket over the smoldering protest movement? None other than former Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, regarded by many farmers as the best friend they ever had.

Butz gives strike leaders credit for "dramatizing the problem" of low farm prices, but he believes that the strike itself, scheduled to begin Dec. 14 unless farmers are guaranteed prices at the parity level, is a bad idea which could be counterproductive.

He observes correctly that livestock producers can't stop animals from growing and grain farmers who skip a cycle in production "face liquidation."

As uncharacteristic as it might seem for Butz to come out contrary to a concept which appears to be gathering grass roots farmer support, he nevertheless raises a needed caution flag. He's right about the consequences to farmers of not marketing their livestock and planting their grain.

In the end, however, it may appear to many farmers that going ahead with the strike is no worse an option than proceding with business-as-usual. May as well go down fighting, many feel.

'Sadie Hawkins Day' may well endure

Richard Worsnop

Washington — Al Capp, creator of the Li'l Abner comic strip, has decreed that Sadie Hawkins Day will fall on Nov. 26 this year. But — sob! — the annual mating ritual will not be observed in Dogpatch, the hillbilly hamlet where it originated. After 43 years, Capp is calling it a career. The last Li'l Abner strip will appear on Sunday, Nov. 13, and there are no plans to carry it on at the hand of another artist.

So good-bye, Mammy and Pappy Yokum and Daisy Mae, farewell, Hairless Joe and Lonesome Polecat, Joe Btfsplk, Moonbeam McSwine, Jubilation T. Cornpone, and all you other denizens of an Appalachia or an Ozarks that never was. It was fun, most of the time, while it lasted.

But Sadie Hawkins Day may well live on indefinitely, Sadie, as Li'l Abner buffs will readily recall, was the ugliest spinster in Dogpatch — no mean feat, considering the stiff competition for the title — and her wealthy father was determined to marry her off. So he organized an annual race in which Dogpatch's unmarried women had license to pursue the town's eligible bachelors. Any male dragged across the finish line before time expired was subjected to instant matrimony, Marryin' Sam presiding.

This, in fact, is how Li'l Abner himself came to be hitched. After years of futile effort, Daisy Mae snagged her man in 1952, laying to rest all the speculation as to Abner's motives for trying so hard to elude Dogpatch's dishiest bachelorette. In due time the couple produced a son, who abruptly stopped growing or aging, in accepted comic-strip fashion, at approximately age 5.

The larger significance of Sadie Hawkins Dayis that it gave rise to the pop-cultural event known as the Sadie Hawkins Dance, held annually in high schools across the land. In contravention of custom, the girls ask the boys to be their dates and usually are expected to pick up the tab as well. Sexist, some would say. But are singles bars any better?

In its heyday in the late 1940s and early 1950s, the Li'l Abner strip was something of a cult among the intelligentsia. Capp's ventures into political and social satire — notably the famous Schmoo episodes — were solemnly analyzed as parables of American life or of the human condition. Capp, who lived in Cambridge, Mass., numbered John Kenneth Galbraith and Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. among his close friends.

Then came the 1960s and the era of violent student protest. Capp was not amused. He took to the college lecture circuit like an avenging angel, claiming that "The martyrs at Kent State were the kids in National Guard uniforms." To many of his fans, Capp seemed to have been transformed almost overnight from an easygoing liberal into a youth-baiting grouch. "The more I see of students," he would tell his hostile campus audiences, "the more I dislike them."

Li'l Abner appeared in approximately 900 newspapers at its peak, and it now runs in about 400 — still an impressive number. Capp is packing it in, he says, because of failing health. But he can take satisfaction in the knowledge that his strip was one of the most popular of all time, ranking right up there with Dick Tracy, Little Orphan Annie, Pogo, Bringing Up Father, Peanuts and now, perhaps, Doonesbury. Comicswise, that's pretty fast company.

The economic scene

By Thomas Mullaney
New York Times Financial Writer

New York — Almost as an afterthought — or so it seemed at first — Arthur F. Burns concluded a recent speech with a paragraph that seems particularly pertinent at this time. It started out saying that "We at the Federal Reserve always welcome advice on how best to proceed," but wound up with a firm reminder of the central bank's determination to retain its independence, with these words:

"Ours, however, is the responsibility to act in the monetary area, and we intend to exercise that responsibility in ways that promote the long-run as well as the immediate interests of the nation."

What the soft-spoken but crusty chairman of the Fed seemed to be saying was this: "We are not dogmatic in our ideas at the Fed, and we realize we are not infallible. We can use some fresh ideas right now at this particularly tough period in our economy. But we know our job is to resist the tide of inflation, defend the integrity of the currency and uphold its value in the international exchange markets. We will not embrace easy expedients to achieve some short-term goals at the risk of forefeiting long-range benefits. So don't expect us to rubber-stamp any policies that point single-mindedly at the objective of faster economic growth now if we think they entail inflationary risks."

It is that kind of philosophy that has drawn considerable criticism to the central bank from both the monetarists, who think it has permitted excessive expansion of the money supply this year, and from the Keynesians, who believe its policies have not been expansive enough and threaten to curtail the recovery because of the rise in interest rates they have fostered.

Even without the chairman's invitation for counsel in the speech at Spokane on Oct. 26, the Fed never lacked outside advice in the past on how it should conduct its operations, but it seems to be getting it more intensely in the confusing, erratic economic climate of recent months.

Perhaps he will get that type of input this week when the Senate Banking Committee holds one of its periodic reviews of monetary policy, starting Wednesday.

While the Fed's actions, by and large, have won wide endorsement in the private economic and financial world this year, there has been growing criticism in political and some other quarters that is bound to come to the surface quite forcefully at the Senate hearings. But maybe some fresh ideas might even be laid on the table to improve the Fed's operations and relations.

For instance, Albert H. Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics, thinks the Fed should back off on its policy of pushing interest rates higher now after having tightened so substantially this year. That's the point that administration sources have also been stressing.

"If I were Dr. Burns," he said, "I'd keep the federal funds rate around where it is now (about 6½-6⅝%) and let the money supply run for a while and see how it goes. I think they have gone far enough with interest rates."

The Financial Digest published by the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. said that a change in the Fed's tactics in releasing money supply data is "in order." It questioned the policy, mandated by Congress, of issuing quarterly the annual growth targets in the money supply, saying that the publication of them, even though they are not as rigid as they seem because of quarterly revisions, "has called Wall Street's attention to the weekly numbers, which it admits are far from perfect."

However, Guy Noyes, senior vice president of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., said he didn't want less information on the monetary numbers, but rather more.

"I find it very difficult to criticize recent Fed policy," he said. "I might nit-pick here and there on some of the things it has done, but I wouldn't want the Fed to say it's been on the wrong track and now they'll try to stablize interest rates. That would be a disaster. But the Fed doesn't have to have adjustments in policy weekly. If I'd go anywhere, I'd go the other way and issue only seasonally adjusted monetary figures, but also the numbers responsible for producing the bottom-line figure on the money supply."

Another financial expert, who generally agreed with the Fed's actions this year, nevertheless thought the time was appropriate to change the basis on which policy is determined. Henry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers said there should not be continued emphasis on the trend in the M-1 measurement of the money supply.

However, James J. O'Leary, vice chairman of the United States Trust Co., who is worried about pressures in the financial markets next year with a big federal deficit and increased private demands for credit, gave a rather unqualified endorsement of how the central bank has been handling monetary policy. He said it has pursued a "skillful strategy" of encouraging a high rate of business expansion that could bring about an escalation of inflation.

That's the point that most supporters of the embattled Fed chairman make. They say the Fed has not been very restrictive at all in a time when money-supply growth has consistently topped the high end of its announced targets. And, as the latest upturn in the wholesale price index and other signals have indicated, the inflationary threat is not receding.

It may be time for some change at the Fed, but not for drastic ones.

Objection voiced to councilman's remarks

Today's Mail

Unwise remark

Lincoln, Neb.

Others may be surprised at Mr. Hampton's use of the word "nigger" but I am not. His "Earl Butz" attitude was obvious during the entire hearing Monday night. He failed to understand. We who oppose his attempt to weaken the Human Rights Ordinance don't need organization to recognize what he is up to. This was pointed out further when Councilman Scherer alluded to the fact that we might not even have known why we were in the hearing room.

I hope the black people Hampton has working for him wise up. Unfortunately Mr. Hampton will be with us for a while, I am sure.

DONNA POLK

Another Earl Butz?

Lincoln, Neb.

I was shocked to read Joe Hampton's remarks made to John Robinson regarding Robinson's concern for human rights and his stand on the Human Rights Ordinance submitted by the commission. To infer that Robinson's concern because he does not agree with Hampton is "unprofessional" and "without integrity" seems as if Hampton is the one with professionalism problems.

To compound the situation, Hampton's reference to those of us who testified as "kooks" or "spooks" seems to signify his view of the people he supposedly serves.

It seems that the major part of civil rights for all people is respect for all people, which Mr. Hampton does not seem to feel.

It appears Lincoln has another Earl Butz on its hands. Let me remind Mr. Hampton that the term "colored" is no more appropriate than "nigger" when referring to black Americans.

Silent no more

Fairmont, Neb.

The article in The Star, "Ag Official Heckled at WIFE Gathering," is certainly a prime example of slanted reporting. It is interesting for me to see that none of the good points that the WIFE members brought out were reported but that our Washington official's statements were. Mr. Hjort had no understanding of agriculture, at all. He had only his USDA figures which were based on 1975.

We did not heckle Mr. Hjort. However, we did interrupt his speech. People can no longer expect us to sit there and listen to other people and our government tell us how much they are doing for us and how good we have it when we simply know better. We are the silent minority no longer.

It was reported that Mr. Hjort said the $2.90 target price on wheat and $2.00 on corn would cover the cost of production for some but not all when in fact the first time Mr. Hjort said it, he said it WOULD cover the cost of production, period. When several from the audience asked him where it would cover the cost of production, he changed his statement to "some, but not all." Our government has a very handy system of coming up with figures that read what our government and non-food-producers want them to read, not what the actual facts are. If our government is doing so much for us, why then is agriculture in this country in trouble and many farmers facing bankruptcy?

How the reporter found Bob Rauner, the one and only person in the audience who would support Mr. Hjort, I don't know. The fact that the reporter felt he should quote Mr. Rauner instead of our WIFE members who know the true facts about farming and could refute some of the statements made by Mr. Hjort is very objectionable to me.

I also object to the fact that the story, "Ag Official Heckled at WIFE Gathering," was in the first section of The Star and with larger headlines than was the article, "Ex-USDA Official Claims U.S. Hated," which was in the second section and was an article about Mr. LaRoux who not only had a tremendous understanding of agriculture and how it works but also of our government and what disastrous things they have been and are doing to agriculture.

Please help us to tell our story, not destroy us. Agriculture IS in trouble in this country and it is not the fault of the farmers.

One small step

Lincoln, Neb.

What a big ballyhoo is being made about the minimum wage law signed by our President increasing the paychecks of "our lowest paid workers" by 1981. In January, 1978, the minimum wage will be $2.65 an hour based on a 44-hour week. If you are employed in the food industry and if you are not a tipped employe, then the powers that be have set up another pay structure. Most employers are against overtime, so if you are presently employed in this business, you could have a check of $116, before taxes.

How many households will be able to make ends meet on this minimum wage? And with the unemployment benefits, food stamps and so forth, how many are going to take a job at the minimum wage? The papers are full of "help wanted" ads and the people who are interested in working for a check are already employed in these low-paying jobs in over 2.4 million hotel, restaurant and private bona fide membership clubs.

These employes may be helped by this small step in the right direction, but until the unemployment laws are better enforced or changed, and even though there are plenty of jobs to be had for anyone willing to work, at minimum wage or higher, we are going to have unemployment. In some cases, you make more not working! No taxes, no transportation cost and no hassle on a job.

Tipped employes did receive a small better deal, but how can a food operation run on waitresses, waiters, bartenders and cocktail personnel? It is the employe behind the scenes who makes this possible; one depends on the other! The dining public deserves the fast, frozen food industry because of the apathy they show.

Too many years I devoted to the food and beverage profession, not realizing what a ripoff it really was, and it took an accident on the job to open my eyes. I hope at my age, it is not too late to learn a new profession, even though my first and last love will be the challenge and self-satisfaction I found in the food and beverage business.

The President stated: "...a step in the right direction." Maybe, but a very small step that was long overdue in the hotel, reetaurant and private club food service.

Good turn-out

Our thanks for the front-page picture and story on the "Children's Zoo Halloween Hullabalu." We had nearly 3,500 children and chaperons on Saturday and Sunday nights at the Children's Zoo. And the zoo staff had thought they might, if lucky, have a crowd close to 1,000 for both nights!

The Lincoln Star certainly did contribute to a safe and fun Halloween for the children of this community.

Lincoln, Neb.

I should like to add my voice (and whatever influence I might have) to those who strenuously object to our tax dollars being used to subsidize speakers who espouse the "Hate America" theories, such as Ms. Fonda. (Congratulations on The Star's editorial! It expressed our dissent very well.)

University regents and other officials responsible should take note that there are still those of us who believe in the concept of freedom, democracy — patriotism.

Much more care must be given as to the speakers on our campuses, since our money goes toward their appearance.

Nebraska case leads the way

Anthony Lewis

Boston — Attorney General Bell made his plea bargain with Richard Helms for practical reasons: the likely obstacles to a jury conviction for perjury. He hoped that the misdemeanor plea, even with a suspended sentence, would deter official lying in the future. Judge Barrington Parker strengthened that hope when he said Helms stood before the court "in disgrace."

But the unredeemed arrogance of Helms's response should have been a warning to Griffin Bell. He had acted for the country's good, Helms said, and he agreed with his lawyer that he would wear the conviction "like a badge of honor."

Frank Hague, the boss of Jersey City, aroused outrage when he said it pithily 40 years ago: "I am the law." But the doctrine that officials may decide for themselves when to obey the law is far more dangerous in the hands of those who wield secret power in Washington today. For we have learned that their talk of national security may cover grave abuses: plots to assassinate foreign leaders, programs to spy illegally on hundreds of thousands of Americans.

The Helms affair should remind Griffin Bell and his colleagues of the need to resist not only official lawlessness but its handmaiden, official secrecy. Bell is sensitive to the problem; soon after taking office he told other agencies that the Justice Department would not defend their denials of information except for persuasive reasons. But his record is marred by one disturbing policy.

The Justice Department has tried in at least two recent cases to expand the use of what the press calls "gag orders" — court orders enforcing silence in pending litigation. It is especially disturbing that one of the cases involves Richard Helms and other former CIA officials, and that the gag order keeps from the public details of their illegal program of domestic spying, Operation Chaos.

The Rockefeller Commission found that Operation Chaos had "unlawfully exceeded the CIA's statutory authority." Among other things the agency indexed the names of 300,000 opponents of the Vietnam war and other targets, and obtained large numbers of intercepted letters and cables to or from them.

Some victims of Operation Chaos sued the former CIA officials and others for damages. Their lawyers asked, in the usual discovery proceedings, for documents on the nature and extent of the program.

Last December the government produced a first batch of documents, edited to delete classified material. But Justice Department lawyers then sought, and won, a court order to keep the plaintiffs or their lawyers from disclosing the unclassified documents.

The department's argument was that publication of material from the documents might produce an unfavorable public climate for the defendants and thus hurt their chance for a fair trial. I happen to think that fair trials are a weighty interest in a civilized society. But there are other interests.

A little more than a year ago the Supreme Court unanimously struck down a gag order barring press comment before trial in a Nebraska murder case. And in several respects, that was a much more compelling occasion for enforced silence than the civil suit over Operation Chaos.

The Nebraska case was a criminal case, with the defendant's life at stake. The crime was gruesome, multiple sex-murders, and published details were particularly likely to prejudice the community and jurors. The trial was held less than three months later, while a trial in the Chaos law suit — if there ever is one — may be years away. There was no great public interest in knowing the murder details before trial, but there is an urgent interest in knowing about a massive program of lawless domestic spying.

The gag order in the Nebraska case was directly against the press, while in the Chaos suit it bars the plaintiffs or their lawyers from speaking to the press. That is a difference, but it is a dubious basis for a distinction of either policy or constitutional law.

The First Amendment protects freedom of both speech and press, and to the same end: public enlightenment. The press has no greater rights than others, except for the practical point that in a complex society it acts as the public's agent for information.

"Prior restraints on speech and publication," Chief Justice Burger said in the Nebraska case, "are the most serious and the least tolerable infringement on First Amendment rights." If so, that must be because of what they do to the interest of the public, not the press alone. The Chaos law suit is just one example of a general principle, but it is hard to imagine a case in which possible damage to fair trial would be more plainly outweighed by the actual damage of prior restraint.

The same Senate committee that asked Richard Helms about the CIA role in Chile and got a false answer asked him about domestic surveillance and got a deceptive one. That the Department of Justice should be acting to keep the facts from the public is impossible to understand.

Are the people entitled to expression?

By Carolyn Clark
Chair, Lancaster County Democrats

Opinion

The aftermath of the October 31 public hearing on the Human Rights Ordinance clearly indicates an impending crisis for the citizens of Lincoln. Our city has long served as an example of concern with providing all its people an opportunity for growth, participation, and dignity. It appears that our status as a leader in the area of civil liberty is now in jeopardy.

Councilman Joe Hampton has categorized the participants in that hearing as hecklers and blackmailers, a patently ridiculous allegation. Characterization of this variety is tantamount to a denial of the public's right to involvement in the government of the City.

The Lancaster County Democratic Party protests the attempt to delete references prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sex, age, marital status, or disability in several sections of Ordinance #77-282 and to permitting any of the businesses in Lincoln to disregard laws against discrimination if they have fewer than fifteen employes. We further protest the derogatory remarks directed toward Councilman John Robinson and the concerned and caring representatives of forty-three local organizations.

The question now is whether the people of Lincoln shall be allowed to participate in government without being subjected to insolence and insults; if the views of the populace are entitled to representation and expression.

Kennedy plugs 'creative leadership'

By Kingsbury Smith

Opinion

Washington — Senator Edward M. Kennedy believes the most important problem confronting the nation today is "support for creative leadership" to deal with domestic and foreign problems.

The legatee of the Kennedy legend, who is playing an increasingly active role in the Senate, said that it is a question of "whether the American people are going to have the kind of leadership to point the way to try to deal with these problems."

Noting that many of the problems are "enormously complex" and that the solution of them may involve the willingness of the American people to adjust their own styles of living, Sen. Kennedy added:

"I think it is basically a question of leadership and will."

The senator did not directly criticize the Carter administration, nor has he done so publicly. Yet his response to questions left the clear impression that he is disappointed with President Carter's economic policies.

There was also the inference that he thinks President Carter is too concerned about inflation, and is attaching too much importance to balancing the budget at the expense of the unemployed, health insurance and other welfare programs.

The president has cited fear of inflation as a major reason for the need to balance the budget. Sen. Kennedy called attention to President Kennedy's June, 1962, speech at Yale in which his brother talked about misleading "myths" in government. One of those "myths," President Kennedy said, was the tendency to measure federal fiscal integrity "by the conventional, or administrative, budget."

If the economic situation worsens and President Carter's popularity is still low in 1979, some political observers predict Sen. Kennedy and California Governor Jerry Brown will team up to take him on in the 1980 primaries.

While this may be a far-fetched possibility, some of the 46-year-old Massachusetts senator's closest friends think his presidential candidacy is inevitable.

Berry enters refurbished front lobby.

Office features blend of old and new.

Bank built solidly in 1908.

Old bank an architectural delight

By Gracia McAndrew
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln attorney John Steven Berry subjectively ranks his new office building among the architectural wonders of the world — the Taj Mahal, Westminster Abbey.

Berry's offices at the corner of 48th Street and St. Paul Avenue are in what was initially the home of the Citizens State Bank.

Erected in 1908, the building was vacated in 1957 when the bank outgrew it.

Since then, the facility has accommodated a dress store, a plant store, a flower shop, a barber shop and even a sound recording studio, area residents say.

This summer, Berry saw the building and decided it could be converted into comfortable and attractive law offices. Sharing the newly renovated building with Berry are attorneys Hal Anderson and Bob Krieger.

"I moved out here because I fell in love with the building," Berry said.

Besides being a building which he felt he could transform once again into a facility with character and luster, there were other selling points, he said.

Berry is quick to point out to visitors that now he has his "own personal bathroom." And, in his office, "I have my own window to look outdoors and see the people on the streets."

After purchasing the building, Berry ordered the removal of the old — a window display case, well-worn linoleum and black acoustic ceiling tile — for the reinstatement of the really old — early 20th century lighting fixtures, high ceilings and a massive wooden desk.

"I'm trying to restore some of the old flavor," he explained.

And he has done just that.

Perhaps the best example of coordinating the old with the new can be seen in the front lobby.

When the remodeling crew began tackling the project, down came the acoustic ceiling tile to reveal stamped, metal ceiling squares. Original panels of bevelled glass framing the eight-foot front door were uncovered and buffed to look like new. Sitting just inside the door are two large, black cream cans displaying pampas grass.

Complementing each other by their marked design contrast are the yesteryear steam-heat radiator, gold and ornate and an old wooden church pew.

Green plants and contemporary paintings and batiks are intermingled among the antiques, some of which are Berry family heirlooms. Others were acquired at garage sales and auctions by Berry's wife, Margaret. Still others, like the antique wall clock which "chimes 30 times at 2:22" and the large circular ship's clock which chimes every hour on the hour, were given to Berry by his clients.

And many of the items which now embellish the law offices came with the building.

"The basement here was a virtual antique store," Berry said.

The original hanging globe lights were in the basement. They now light the office's law library. Another eye-catcher in the library is the row of antique, glass-front book cases which line the walls. The book cases, complete with leather-bound law books, were donated by Berry's Uncle Wade Stevens, a retired McCook lawyer.

Probably one of the most surprising aspects of the entire project, Berry points out, is that architects Jerry Berggren and Woody Hull and building contractor Brad Rowen had the building ready three weeks after beginning the remodeling.

Of course, they did have a little help from the office staff. Some could be found at the building in the wee hours of the morning staining woodwork.

"We were in in three weeks, but it was a bit chaotic with buzz saws going at first," Berry said.

'Schoolboy' not for nibbler

Book Review

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Mysteries, murder and spy, are like salted peanuts to me. I skim them quickly, looking for the tell-tale signs that will unravel the puzzle. Then I reach for another.

After the first page of "The Honourable Schoolboy," I realized that this book was not going to fly by in a three-hour sitting.

The spy story by John LeCarre is a T-bone steak in the whodunit market. It has a rich, deep flavor that is best enjoyed in a leisurely atmosphere where the reader can savor each bite. I certainly isn't for nibbling.

The plot line itself is simple: a British intelligence agency followed a trial that leads to a Chinese communist who feeds opium and secrets to the Russians.

LeCarre's last book, "Tinker, Tailor, Solider, Spy," ended with the devastating unmasking of a double agent at the heart of the British secret service (known as the Circus).

"The Honourable Schoolboy" begins with the demoralized Circus and George Smiley, the man charged with restoring the health and reputation of his organization.

Smiley and a handful of trusted colleagues search for clues that will lead them back to the infamous Karla, the Soviet officer in Moscow Centre who masterminded the double agent treachery.

The clues lead to Hong Kong, to the battlefields of Vietnam, to a complex Hong Kong businessman who names his winning race horse after a dead son.

Jerry Westerby, a reporter and sometime Circus agent with a penchant for women, is sent to smoke out the suspects.

Though the plot line may be simple the book itself is complex in the detail of the Orient, the detail of the Circus, complete with the spy vernacular — "moles" for double agents, "the Cousins" for the American intelligence organization. And it is heavily peopled with eccentric, professionals who seem to drink for a living and write for a pastime.

In fact, like a richly patterned tapestry, the novel is exciting to behold, but a devil to understand. It takes pen and paper to keep track of the long list of characters introduced early, without warning or background, amidst the unfamiliar Circus slang.

And while the book may be rich in detail it is strikely shallow in character portraits, particularly the women.

Most of the females that LeCarre presents are only fleetingly seen, a head on the pillow, a one-night stand for the hard-drinking men who go on to their heady and dangerous work the next morning.

Even the two women who play central roles in the unraveling of the mystery are disturbingly one-sided creatures.

An aging and alcoholic former Circus staff member, called back into service for the Karla chase, is shown as a brilliant mind in a grossly overweight and arthritic body.

And the beautiful round-eyed mistress of the Hong Kong businessman is forever just a sexual treasure.

LeCarre uses his women characters as props, seen only through the jaundiced eyes of the men who surround them.

The thoughts of Westerby when he first sees the round-eyed mistress sums up the view of women in the book:

"There were women in Jerry's world who carried their bodies as if they were citadels to be stormed only by the bravest

There were women who seemed determined to hate themselves, hunching their backs and locking up their hips. And there were women who only had to walk toward him to bring him a gift."

Mother wants bit of advice repeated

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago I wrote to you when my heart was heavy, thinking I had nothing to lose by asking for your help. In one short paragraph you gave me the solution and replaced my anguish with peace. (I am enclosing the correspondence.)

Now my married daughter is facing the same problem I faced. Will you please run my letter and your response? She desperately needs to hear it — but not from me.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Yes, I will. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 40 years, and all the years of my married life my husband has had other women. He never had the same one for very long, but it has been one after the other.

He has always been a loving and generous husband and a wonderful father to our children, and I know he loves me. He has never embarrassed me by going out in public with another woman, but as discreet as he was, somehow I always found out. I have asked him several times why he needs other women, because I am by nature a very affectionate person. He gets defensive and has no answer.

I love him dearly and would never consider leaving him, but the older I get, the more it hurts. I am 60 and he is 63.

Can you advise me?

TROUBLED AT 60

DEAR TROUBLED: You say you love him, and I believe you do. To "love" a person is to accept him with all his faults, weaknesses and imperfections.

Don't dwell on his infidelity. (Who can know the most intimate needs of another?) No one has everything.

DEAR ABBY: I've noticed that over the years, your readers, and even you, yourself, have suggested that you "print" a letter.

As a printer, may I suggest that you are in error. What you do is "publish" — not print.

This may seem trivial to you, but printing is a time-honored skill, requiring years to perfect. And a printer is an artist and craftsman.

So, Dear Abby, I'll leave the publishing to you, if you will leave the printing to me.

INK IN MY BLOOD
IN MEDINA, O.

DEAR INK: All right — you print and I'll publish, but my Webster's International Dictionary (second edition, unabridged) lists "publish" as a synonmy for "print," and "print" as a synonym for "publish."

Cut your loss and deduct it

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — If you own a fallen stock or mutual fund, you have until Dec. 30 to keep it from being a total loss. As long as you sell by that date, the loss is deductible on your 1977 income tax return.

By holding the stock, hoping it will "come back," you lose the deduction, which could be worth quite a bit of money. And the stock may frustrate you by never coming back, or by staying low for many years.

Taking a loss in a stock appalls many investors. They "can't afford" a loss, hence cling to the fiction that as long as they don't sell, the loss hasn't really happened.

That idea is wrong. The loss has definitely, positively occurred, whether you sell the stock or not. The only question is whether you're going to make use of the loss as a tax deduction, or whether you have good reason to let the deduction slip by.

Ideally, you should take all losses while they're still small. One common approach is to sell anything that goes down 10 percent, no matter what. On occasion, a stock declines 10 or 11 percent, then turns right around and climbs into the clouds. But most stocks that fall 10 percent decline a lot further before they're through. That's because apparent. Once apparent, the decline accelerates.

No one can be right about the stock market all the time, says stock market author and advisor Gerald Loeb, paraphrasing Bernard Baruch, "But if you can be right three or four times out of 10 and cut your losses, you can make a fortune."

You get a bigger tax break on losses this year, thanks to the 1976 Tax Reform Act. The amount of loss deductible against ordinary income in a single year has been doubled; next year, it will be triple the old level. Here are the rules on deducting capital losses, according to the tax publisher Prentice-Hall:

(1) You can deduct capital losses from capital gains, without limit. If you took any gains this year and can take an equal amount of losses, the tax on the gains is completely eliminated.

(2) Losing stocks sold nine months or less from the date they were bought are considered short-term losses. These are fully deductible from ordinary income at the rate of $2,000 this year, and $3,000 a year starting in 1978. Excess losses can be carried forward from year to year until they're entirely used up.

(3) Losing stocks sold more than nine months after they were bought are long-term losses. These are only 50 percent deductible against ordinary income, with the same limit on annual deductions as for short-term losses.

(4) If you're lucky enough to have gains, they're taxed this way: Short-term gains at ordinary income rates; long-term gains, 50 percent tax-exempt, the other 50 percent at ordinary rates.

If you believe your losing stock will soon improve, handle it this way: Sell the stock for the tax loss, wait 31 days, then buy it back (If you buy in 30 days or less, you'll nullify the loss.) Tax losses can be taken right up to the last business day of the year. But it normally takes five business days to register a gain, so take gains by Dec. 22.

Opening lead — three of clubs.

While it is good strategy to try to lure declarer into a mistake when you are a defender, it is poor strategy to do anything that may trap partner into making a mistake. Topnotch defense is difficult enough to achieve without adding to the basic difficulty by creating the opportunity for partner to make a mistake.

Consider this deal where West was largely responsible for failing to defeat three notrump. He got off to the right lead, all right, but he failed to capitalize on it. East won the low club lead with the ace and returned the deuce to show he had started with four clubs.

After South's ten lost to the jack, West cashed his king and continued with the five. East won with the nine but was then faced with the question of which suit to lead next. South had discarded a heart from his hand and a heart and a diamond from dummy.

It was not easy for East to lead a spade into dummy's K-J-8-2, so he made the more natural return of a heart. As a result, declarer scored nine tricks consisting of three hearts and six diamonds.

This unfortunate result could have been avoided had West cashed his ace of spades before leading the fourth round of clubs. He could tell from East's plays of the A-2-8, in that order, that East originally held four clubs and that the contract could be stopped by first cashing the ace of spades. Had East held only the A-8-2 of clubs originally, he would have returned the eight at trick two.

The deuce followed by the eight proved that East had four clubs, and West should not have presented his partner with the problem of which suit to play at trick five. In effect, West laid the trap that East fell into.

Learn to be an accomplished listener

When it comes to listening on the job, our work is never done. We listen to many different people in many different situations every day. "To listen," some wise soul once said, "is more blessed than to talk." It should be. It's a lot harder.

Maybe you've never given it a thought, but listening is an acquired skill. Breaking inefficient habits and forming new good ones can make you roughly twice as effective in your everyday business life.

What are the on-the-job payoffs of good listening?

— Listening reduces grievances. A survey made by Chicago's Loyola University recently asked: "What is the single most important attribute of an effective manager?" Listening was what the answers of thousands of workers boiled down to. Most of those interviewed said something like: "I like my boss; he listens to me I can talk to him."

— Listening promotes understanding. You just don't appreciate the other person's point of view unless you listen to it first. And without knowing what he or she thinks, how can you move him or her toward your thinking?

Memo to a Working Woman

By Muriel Lederer

— Better selling is possible through better listening. Salespersons have been found to be notoriously poor listeners. Being alert to what a customer is saying will boost sales quickly and permanently.

— Money losses due to faulty listening can be eliminated. By listening more attentively in the first place, you can carry out instructions properly and eliminate misunderstandings.

— Listening encourages new ideas. We all listen by habit to what pleases us, but we shut our minds to anything which doesn't interest us. However, in business there are messages which may not please or specially interest us but are vital to the job at hand.

Do you have the habit of not listening?

For the most part, poor listening is unintentional — it's a habit left over from childhood. In any typical conversation one person is waiting anxiously for the other to take a breath so he or she can start, especially if he or she disagrees with whomever is speaking. Even if he or she agrees, though, that person's mind begins to wander.

It's possible some people don't even hear themselves. In his Chicago Daily News column some years ago, Sidney J. Harris noted, "I was in a shop recently when a lady and her teen-age daughter asked to look at the merchandise.

"The clerk, in a snippy tone of voice, showed it, and lady gently rebuked her in the most polite terms, as she walked off with her daughter.

"The clerk called to a friend at the other end of the counter, 'Did you hear how she talked to me? Some nerve!' "

We often don't hear the emotional tone of our voices, particularly in conversation between parents and children. Harris went on to say, "What the children listen for is the tone on the voice, not so much the words. And, if a child 'hears' boredom, irritation, impatience, hostility, or carefully controlled hysteria, he will respond to the emotional effect, not to the words themselves." How acutely do we really hear ourselves?

Listening is not the same thing as hearing. Hearing is merely a physical experience that's virtually impossible to avoid. Listening is a complicated process of absorbing, judging and acting on what you hear.

You can start sharpening your listening skills now by developing and practicing these good "ear work" habits:

— Don't try to pretend you're paying attention when you're really not.

— Don't let yourself be distracted by anything, particularly things like the speaker's appearance, delivery or mannerisims.

— Sit up or stand up straight. Look the speaker in the eye.

— Don't let your mind wander; concentrate on what's being said.

— Listen for the feeling or tone of the words.

— Keep an open mind as you listen to the speaker.

— Give the speaker a chance by not deciding beforehand the subject will be uninteresting.

— Don't be thinking up arguments mentally to counter what is being said while the speaker is still speaking.

— Anticipate the speaker's next point, then you'll be ready for what he or she says.

— Every so often, mentally summarize what you've heard.

— Listen for ideas, not just for facts.

Good listening can be your key to real communication in your job and in your family.

(If you have any questions you wish answered, please write to Muriel Lederer, in care of this newspaper.)

Capitol offers leaf souvenirs

Salt Lake City (AP) — Anyone who wants souvenirs from the state Capitol can have some for free. The Utah Building Board is giving away leaves from the Capitol lawns — 10 truckloads of them.

The board decided it would be cheaper to give the leaves to anyone willing to pick them up than to have them hauled to the dump.

Randy Manning, Capitol facilities coordinator, said the leaves are in piles near the Capitol greenhouse. He said they are good for mulch or composting.

Band concerts woven into fabric of her life

Write-On

By Mrs. John Kreuch

Trumpets, trombones, flutes, cymbals crashing, the boom of the big bass horn, the throbbing steady beat of the drums — all combined to produce some of the greatest music ever composed.

Bandstand, U.S.A.

With band concerts again being resumed at Antelope Park, I suddenly realized how this spirited music has been like a lovely, colorful thread woven through the fabric of my life, for so many special events are associated with its sound.

My earliest recollection stems from the fact that my father was a member of the small town band in Steinauer, where I was born. He played the bass horn, old-fashioned model, but so bright and shiny I could see my reflection in it. It was the 4th of July, 1912. I was very small but many things made pictures in my mind and I remember them today.

The white-painted bandstand on the corner of Main Street, decked out in red, white and blue cotton bunting. Babies in lavishly decorated wicker buggies. Kids on bicycles, the spokes wound carefully with red, white and blue crepe paper, formed intricate designs as they whizzed by.

My two brothers, sitting on the edge of the bandstand floor, dividing a nickel sack of peanuts. Picnics everywhere, the food set out on red checkered tablecloths on the grass. A balloon ascent was the big feature of the day's celebration. Firecrackers exploding, and through it all — the band played on!

My father, tall, stout and proud, played with great gusto, his cheeks puffing in and out each time he "tooted" on his horn. "Semper Fidelis," "Stars and Stripes," Sousa was their favorite. I can still feel the thumping in my heart as I listened, my hand clasped tightly in my mother's protecting one.

We moved to Lincoln the same year, where my father, a mail carrier, again became involved with his beloved music, joining the Post Office Band, of which he was a member for many years.

World War I was the occasion for many parades — flags waving, bands playing patriotic sons and always included was the popular song of the time, "Over There," as our young men marched off to fulfill their duty as American citizens, ready and willing to defend their country. I felt both pride and sadness as my brother was among them.

Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1918, a big day in my life as I, along with hundreds of Lincoln schoolchildren, flags in hand, marched down O Street celebrating the victory. How the band played! The meaning of the "Stars and Stripes" was never felt so deeply in my heart as on that day.

In the Roaring Twenties a band concert at Antelope Park was practically the only entertainment we had on Sunday afternoons. There were no Sunday movies in those days. My girlfriend and I walked blocks to attend, meeting friends, muching popcorn, while listening to the tunes of the day — "See You in My Dreams," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," Victor Herbert melodies. And I remember Harriet Cruse Remmer the vocalist singing "Tea for Two." Familiar marches and overtures were also played. It was a great family pastime.

July 31, 1927, one of the happiest times of my life. It was Sunday and my "first date" with John, who was to become my husband two years later. Yes, we went to the band concert at Antelope Park. I'll admit, however, I don't recall a single tune played that day. I was tuned in to someone else!

Every Sunday after that, all summer long, we were at the band concert, sitting on a park bench, getting to know one another with music providing a romantic background, afterwards walking hand in hand back to my home.

Our marriage in May 1929 was quite an event and rather unusual, as my father insisted that the Post Office Band play at the reception, which was held on the lawn of my home. It is one of the dearest memories I have of him, for there was a "wish of happiness" for us in each note he played, especially when the strains of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" floated out on the cool spring air.

The drought years of the '30s, when our three daughters were growing up. Concerts at Antelope Park were part of their entertainment too, but mostly it was too hot to venture out and, I believe, they were discontinued for a while.

"In the '40s, when World War II was in progress, the Lincoln Air Base was established and again, band concerts at Antelope Park played a big part in Sunday entertainment. Along with many Lincoln families, we often invited the boys stationed here to our homes for a home-cooked meal, after which we would take them to the park.

As the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" it was an inspiring scene. The many uniformed men gathered there would stand at attention, saluting the flag as it was raised to the highest point on the flag pole, its colors waving gently in the summer breeze against the endless blue sky above.

The years pass quickly, but memories came alive this summer as John and I once again walked hand in hand down to old Antelope Park to enjoy the band concerts as we used to — 50 years ago!

Motorist's exercises unobtrusive

Leningrad, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — For long-haul truckers and other distance drivers, the Latvian newspaper Soviet Youth has come up with a 12-step exercise program which it recommends be carried out every two hours.

"These exercises help heat up the muscles which have been dormant for a long time and also help relax those muscles which have been constantly tense," the newspaper said. Here are the 12 exercises which the paper said should not attract "undue attention from passersby:"

— Get out of the car, lift your hands above your head and breathe deeply.

— Bend over with hands straightened behind you. While breathing in and out deply, move your weight from one foot to the other.

— Run around the car slowly while flapping your arms.

— Run around the car again, this time kicking your heels up as high as possible.

— March around the car in goose-step fashion, pushing your legs forward and up as high as possible.

— Put your hands benind your head and twist your body in a circular motion.

Bend your body slightly forward, garb the bumper with your hands and try to lift the car.

— Put your foot under the bumper and try to lift the car with your foot.

— Put one foot on the bumper and try to push the car down.

— Put your hands on the finder and move your legs as far back as possible, at the same time pushing down on the fender.

— Repeat the above procedure, but instead of pushing down, do several pushups.

— Run around the car slowly once again, breathing in and out deeply.

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — A little rain blew into our corner of Oz. I broke out my unbrella and gave the moppets a lesson in safety.

"If you are attacked by a tiger, point your unbrella at him. Open it, close it and open it again. Slowly. The tiger thinks you are a giant, poisonous puff adder and will start backing his engines."

You don't learn that kind of thing in schools. I read it somewhere. Always wanted to try it. Maybe not with a big tiger. A baby tiger.

Anyway, it's information that could save your life. If you meet a tiger. On a rainy day.

The mailperson brings the mail. Through the rain. Through storm and sleet and dark of night. Our mailperson is a girl.

All mail is delivered by people who have been neutered by the Postal Service. The receiver is "Occupant."

☆ ☆ ☆

We used to get our mail in the village post office where we carved our names on the desk while waiting.

We came down about 10 o'clock. Stood around and spread the gossip — it was better than a newspaper.

"Must have been some party over at the Jones's last night. I could hear her throwing the dishes. Wham!"

Our dogs waited outside. Cutting up little doggy touches. Arf, arf!

There were pictures on the wall: "Wanted for armed robbery and assault."

I was not just "Occupant." I was right in there with my government. In the chase. The pursuit of justice.

☆ ☆ ☆

Along with putting mailpersons in neutral, the post office has knocked off some of its best publicity.

What happened to the Pony Express? "Wanted: Adventurous young men . . ." What about "Snowshoe" Thompson who skied the mail between Hangtown and the Comstock Lode?

Wells Fargo has become a glass-front bank. (Where is the stagecoach thundering down the road? Black Bart stepping from the brush, masked and with leveled shotgun: "Throw down the box!"

The mailperson hands me the mail: "Have a nice day."

"Occupant" retreats inside. Reaches for a butter knife — (to slit the mail, my dear) — and the cooking sherry.

☆ ☆ ☆

In the post office, the mail was slipped into the boxes from behind. The letters landed with little clicking sounds. You went over and opened your box with a combination lock. A safecracking technique.

There was no "Occupant" mail. But there was a lot of useless stuff. Cheese catalogues and such.

We dumped it forthwith in a barrel and stood in the corner. We didn't complicate life.

☆ ☆ ☆

In the friendly post office we learned whose child had measles. Whose husband had taken to drink. And who had driven him to it.

Such pleasures are denied "Occupant." "Occupant" is a zip code for soap coupons. A number on an empty street.

"Occupant sits home with folded umbrella, waiting for the tiger who never comes.

Opera for TV brings dispute

Rome (UPI) — Italian television weekly Radio-Corriere TV says there is trouble at Milan's La Scala opera house because Austrian conductor Herbert von Karajan is trying to prevent a Dec. 7 televised screening of Verdi's "Don Carlos."

The trouble, it seems, is that the scheduled performers, including Mirella Freni, Jose Carreras, Piero Cappuccilli and Nikolai Giaurov, are already under contract to von Karajan to film another version of Don Carlos.

La Scala Superintendent Carlo Maria Badini, asked about reports that von Karajan and the film company he is linked with are waving around their contracts with the performers, said: "There may have to be a choice between the two versions."

Sagging eyelids are maddening

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I wonder if you can tell me if I'm being silly or way off base. I don't mind my wrinkles, but this oversupply of eyelids is driving me crazy. They sag so much that I never appear to have my eyes open. That isn't too bad, but when the new lashes grow out at the corners they end up irritating my eyes. My real question is: can this excess skin be removed? If it can be done, what length of time must one be confined afterwards? Otherwise I am 54 and in revoltingly good health, according to my last physical. —Mrs. P.K.

Some sagging is to be expected with age, but yours seems to be out of the ordinary. A plastic surgeon can remove excess skin fold.

To Your Good Health

I can't predict the length of recovery time. It may require only a couple of days in the hospital. If there is any discoloration a few more days of confinement may be necessary.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Are moles ever malignant? —J.K.

Rarely. Interestingly enough, I have actually seen figures on the odds, released in a report by the American Medical Association. I dug it out for you. I don't know who did the counting, but someone has estimated that there are about four billion nevi (moles) in the U.S. That compares with 7,000 cases of malignant nevi. So the odds that a mole is malignant, according to the study, are about 500,000 to one against. Changes in color or size of a mole should be reported, however.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I realize this isn't the worst problem one can have with a teenager, but my son is a health nut and has been taking vitamins and other substances. He has had a 15-pound weight loss in about two months. I wonder if there is a connection? —Mrs. W.S.

Only if he has been depriving himself of calories by food restriction. He may have the mistaken notion that vitamins make up for food intake. They don't, of course.

Health Tip

Asthma is a chronic illness in which the victim has difficulty in breathing. It is not contagious, and fortunately, most attacks of asthma are relatively mild. If neglected, it increases in severity and endangers health as time goes on.

The Nebraska Medical Association points out that most asthma attacks are triggered by an allergen. It could be almost anything — foods, furs, feathers, pollen — that starts the flare-up. Sometimes a bacterial infection of the throat, nose or sinuses can touch off an asthma attack, nervous tension sometimes is a factor.

In a severe attack, the victim appears to be suffocating. He becomes pale and turns bluish, perspires heavily. He is using all of his strength to breathe. Fortunately these attacks can be relieved by medical treatment.

Finding the allergen is the first step in dealing with chronic asthma. Occasionally it is obvious, but most often a series of tests are required.

Occasionally, an asthma patient will be helped by a change of climate, but doctors advise that you proceed with caution. You may develop a new allergy to things in the new climate.

Wooden cans may someday hold beer

St. Louis (UPI) — Beer drinkers may be hoisting their favorite brew in wooden cans someday, says a spokesman for a leading brewer here.

The can is in the "highly experimental and research stage now," said the spokesman for Anheuser-Busch, Inc.

He said prototypes were made from pressed wood coated with a transparent aluminum film to resemble a metal can. He added that wooden cans would be cheaper and easier to dispose of.

Replacing juror slows up trial

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Nebraska City — Delayed a full day for the selection of a substitute juror, the murder trial of local salvage dealer Robert Beers is expected to begin receiving evidence Wednesday.

Prior to the calling of a long list of prosecution witnesses, however, both the state and defense will present opening statements. Otoe County Attorney William F. Davis will lead off by basically outlining the case against Beers.

In a surprise turn Tuesday, the trial was postponed a day after it was discovered that juror George Stukenholtz has a son who recently became a Nebraska state trooper. District Judge Raymond Case upheld objections of defense counsel Richard Hoch that the "close relationship to an officer" might be prejudicial to the defendant.

Stukenholtz, a Nebraska City farmer and chemical company employe, reportedly approached the judge Tuesday morning about the propriety of his serving. Since Beers is accused of slaying one officer and wounding another, July 9, the court was sensitive to any possible bias toward lawmen as prospective jurors were examined Monday.

Three persons were excused on that basis, including the wife of one local policeman. The questioning did not elicit Stukenholtz's situation, although Judge Case noted that the juror hadn't tried to conceal it.

The juror was replaced by another rual Nebraska City man Tuesday afternoon after five persons were examined from the remaining jury panel. Two were stricken on grounds they had already formed an opinion on the case. Two others were removed by peremptory (no cause required) challenge.

Beers, 39, is charged with first-degree murder in the shooting of Nebraska City policeman Gary White, 24. He also faces a felony count of shooting with intent to kill, wound or maim officer Pete Rishel, 22.

Fremont crash claims second Elkhorn youth

Associated Press

A Missouri man and an Elkhorn teen-ager have become the state's latest traffic victims, authorities said Tuesday.

Colleen Leonard, 13, Elkhorn, died Monday night of injuries she received Sunday in a one-car accident four miles east of Fremont, the Dodge County Sheriff's office said.

Also killed in the crash was Joseph J. Horvatch, 19, Elkhorn. The State Patrol said the two were passengers in an eastbound car driven by Dennis L. Anderson, 19, Gretna. The car left Neb. 8, rolled into a ditch and struck an enbankment.

Ralph Turner, 34, Kansas City, Mo., died early Tuesday in a one-car accident on Neb. 370 while crossing the Bellevue bridge from Iowa to Nebraska, the State Patrol said.

Ag input in energy work urged

By Gary Kemper
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

South Sioux City — Agriculture can make a much better argument for research dollars than for "priority status" in a national energy policy, according to a University of Iowa history professor.

Speaking at the second annual Midwestern Conference on Food and Social Policy here Tuesday, Dr. Ellis Hawley said farmers should put more emphasis on the search for energy alternatives rather than seeking "special treatment" in energy legislation.

Despite what he called an "unparalleled crunch in the history of farm management," Hawley questioned the role of U.S. agricultural leaders in their search for special treatment in the way of tax cuts and priority in the event of oil rationing.

The U.S. has been the top energy consumer in the world since 1850, Hawley said. The first energy crisis came in World War I when large quantities of coal were needed, he said. The supply was more than enough, but the problem came in transportation of the coal, he pointed out.

The second crisis came in World War II with petroleum, Hawley stated. Again the problem was not supply, but transportation, he added.

Neither of these crises had much impact on the American farmer, he said.

Present energy problems began with the Arab oil embargo in 1974 when Arab imports accounted for 4 percent of the total U.S. consumption, Hawley said. Arab imports now account for 17 percent, he pointed out.

Another contributing factor is the popular movement for more evironmental control, he said.

"The farmers' increased dependence on petroleum, coupled with the impact of a diminishing supply, makes a better argument for energy alternative research than for priority status in an energy plan," Hawley stated.

Dr. Ed Stickler of the engineering department of Deere and Co. of Moline, Ill., said energy alternatives that have been researched are "imperfect, but at least provide some direction."

Stickler said a diesel engine appears likely to remain as the basic source of power for the American farm in the immediate future because of its ability to use "inferior fuel."

Mechanization of the farm will never be replaced as an energy alternative, he said. "When the cost of $26.50 in wages for one man to work an average 10-hour day is equivalent to only three cents of electrical usage, it's easy enough to see why farming has become so mechanized," he said.

Stickler said the cost of the energy used in preparing the average food item is 1.7 times the cost of producing it.

Marianne Means, national affairs columnist for King Features Syndicate, said Congress has given very little thought to farm energy problems.

"The energy issue is a giant political football that has been tossed around by the administration, Congress and consumer groups," she said.

The potential of solar energy has caused the most excitement in an administration task force set up to study the energy situation, she said.

State eminent domain law draws differing opinions

United Press International

There was a sharp clash of opinions Tuesday concerning how well Nebraska's eminent domain law is working for public power districts.

John McPhail, an attorney for the Nebraska Public Power District, said he feels the law is functioning well, but several farmers said the statute does not adequately protect farmers whose lands are taken over.

"Generally and broadly speaking, the current law is fair both to the district and landowners with whom we deal," said McPhail during testimony before a special legislative committee.

He said the present statute, adopted in 1973, resulted from long study and represented a compromise.

McPhail said NPPD has gone even further than the law requires and holds information meetings in addition to the public hearing mandated by the statute before proceeding to acquire right-of-way for transmission lines.

According to the attorney, 85 to 90% of the right-of-way acquired by NPPD is done through voluntary agreements. He said 160 landowners were involved in a 115 kilovolt line built in the mid 1960s between North Platte and Paxton with only five condemnations.

On a 230 kilovolt line from North Platte to Ogallala, constructed in 1968, there were only three condemnations among the 173 tracts, he said.

Robert Heubner, a Hershey farmer, testified ahead of McPhail and said he and others objected to the location of lines over their property but that it didn't do any good.

He recommended periodic reviews of payments made to landowners for easements in an effort to provide them with more equity in the matter. Another Hershey farmer, Bill Moorehead, proposed power companies lease the land from the owner with the stipulation the agreement would be reviewed periodically to make sure the farmer is getting treated fairly.

A Lincoln attorney, Asa A. Christensen, much of whose practice involves eminent domain, made a number of recommendations. One of them was that "when an agency (of governemnt) can take an easement rather than a fee title, this should be done."

He also said there should be some guarantee giving the landowners whose property has been taken over the first right of refusal to rent or buy, if the property becomes available at a later date.

Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook sponsored the resolution calling for the special committee to be set up to study complaints about possible eminent domain abuses.

Utility hike justification requested

Omaha (UPI) — State Sen. Pat Venditte, of Omaha, said Tuesday he has requested a detailed explanation from the Metropolitan Utilities District on how it could justify its recent 22 percent rate increase.

"Several state senators share the concern over the rate increase," Venditte said, "and many people have expressed concern that they cannot afford another rate increase."

Under present statutes, Venditte said public utilities are able to set their own rates.

"They are not under the scrutiny of a rate regulating agency," the South Omaha lawmaker said. "This points out the fact there may be a need for state regulation of rates of every utility, whether public or private."

Venditte said he had requested MUD to present its rate increase explanation during a Nov. 30 Public Works Committee hearing in Omaha.

The senator said he felt the public "has a right to a detailed explanation" o the rate increase and "the Legislature must do all it can to help provide the answers."

Venditte said he is chairing the hearing which concerns legislative Resolution 27, a proposal by Venditte to study the possibility of merging MUD with the Omaha Public Power District.

At the time the rate increase was approved, the MUD board said it was necessitated by higher costs of wholesale natural gas imposed by Northern Natural Gas Co., Omaha.

Fan mail fills Zorinsky's mailbox

Omaha (AP) — Nebraska Sen. Edward Zorinsky's mailbox has been full ever since the Senate started charging its members for haircuts.

The outspoken senator had been receiving a stream of praiseworthy correspondence because of his announcement that he felt like resigning due to the slow pace of the Senate.

When Zorinsky said he was frustrated with Senate foot-dragging, and the attention given to minor details such as whether or not haircuts in the Senate barbership should be free, the stream grew.

Once Zorinsky's complaints were made public through print and electronic media, the stream widened to a deluge.

Now the Senate barbershop is charging for its services, and Zorinsky's office is working 14 hours a day answering mail.

"Letters were coming in at the rate of more than 100 a day," Mrs. Bernice Labedz, a Zorinsky aide in Omaha, said.

A second wave of fan mail flowed Zorinksy's way in September after he announced he was returning to the federal treasury $313,016 in unspent office funds.

People tipped their hats, offered their votes, expressed their pride and praised his honesty.

Zorinsky has answered all the mail and many of his replies include his credo:

"If everyone puts a drop in the bucket it will eventually be full."

Although the lion's share of his mail came from Nebraska, Mrs. Labedz said letters came from as far as London, England.

"I was surprised at how much mail we got from other states," she said.

Many letters carried the same challenge: "Hang in there."

And one letter on lined tablet paper came from a citizen in North Platte, Neb., who couldn't wait long enough to buy some fancy writing paper.

"Give 'em hell, senator," the letter said, "we're with you."

DeCamp asks to be at meeting

Neligh Sen. John DeCamp asked by recent letter that he and Bellwood Sen. Loran Schmit be included in any meeting between state gasohol interests and the Carter administration.

DeCamp, in a letter addressed to Gov. J. James Exon and Holly Hodge of Holdrege, gasohol committee chairman, said he and Schmit have been actively promoting gasohol for some time.

"In view of this and our abiding interest in the whole grain alcohol-gasohol program, it would seem appropriate that we would have an opportunity to be with you or meet with you and these other officials involved in helping to promote this, including the president or his representative and the secretary of agriculture," DeCamp wrote.

In a postscript, DeCamp said he understood the meeting may occur Friday, a day which he has free. In the past, Republicans Schmit and DeCamp have questioned whether Democratic Gov. Exon is fully behind gasohol, the gasoline and alcohol fuel blend.

Zorinsky would support Exon

Grand Island (UPI) — Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., Tuesday said he would support Gov. J. James Exon if he wins the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Exon has not announced his political plans, although many expect him to make a bid for the Senate.

At a news conference, Zorinsky was asked who he favored to replace retiring Sen. Carl Curtis.

Zorinsky said Exon "would be a good one to have in Washington."

Zorinsky said he was a Democrat and would support the Democratic nominee.

On another matter, Zorinsky said a bill he introduced to provide federal aid to build railroad overpasses should come up in Senate next year.

Many communities were built around the railroad, and with the increasing number of coal trains, these towns need financial help to separate highway and rail traffic, he said.

Zorinsky was in Grand Island to speak to about 300 youngsters participating in Hall County Government Day.

UNL reports death of Merk Hobson, 56

Dr. Merk Hobson, 56, a member of the University of Nebraska faculty and staff for 24 years, died Sunday at Rochester, Minn., the university said Tuesday.

Services were set for Wednesday at Mount Horeb, Wis.

• Since resigning as executive vice president of academic affairs in 1974, Hobson has been on leave from the university operating a family business in Little Norway, Wis.

He joined the university faculty in 1950 as an assistant professor of chemical engineering and became dean of the College of Engineering and Architecture in 1957. He was named vice chancellor for research and dean of the Graduate College in 1950 and was appointed vice chancellor and dean of the faculty in 1966.

He was acting chancellor from January 1969 to February 1970.

D. B. Varner, former University of Nebraska president who succeeded Hobson as university chancellor in 1970, said, "Merk Hobson was one of the finest professionals with whom I have ever worked in higher education.

"He was loyal to the University of Nebraska and made great contributions to it in every academic area," Varner said.

Council asked to reconsider court decision

Owners of the Chateau LaFleur said Tuesday they will ask the City Council to reconsider its decision to continue court action to force improvements promised 10 years ago.

The council voted 4 to 3 Monday to reject a compromise in which the owners promised to perform drainage work in return for cancellation of requirements for a golf course and swimming pool.

Byron Lower, general manager of the Graf trust, said the new owners were unaware at the time of purchase of the requirements agreed to by the original developer.

Ed board will accept Cheney if petition wins

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln Board of Education members agreed Tuesday to accept part of the Cheney School District if a petition drive to divide that district is successful.

But board members made it clear that the vote should not be seen as encouragement or even support of the Cheney petition. It should be viewed as a neutral stand that merely allows Cheney residents to make their own decisions, said Lincoln Supt. John Prasch.

Some Cheney District taxpayers organized a petition drive that would divide the current Class I district among its four neighbors — Norris, Waverly, Lincoln and Palmyra.

If the four school districts agree to the division, and if 60% of the Cheney District registered voters sign the peition, the division would begin next fall.

By refusing to allow the petition process to move forward, the board could thwart the majority wishes of Cheney taxpayers, Prasch pointed out.

"I want to be sure our board is not caught in the middle of that mess down there," said Williamette Shafer, referring to divided Cheney opinion over the division of the district.

Only Milan Wall, voted against the Cheney measure during the Tuesday board meeting.

The Cheney District will not be a part of the Lincoln metropolitan area for the next 25 years according to Lincoln's Comprehensive plan, Wall said. He argued that extending the school boundaries will add to the pressure to extend the city boundaries and city services to the southeast.

The board unanimously approved a policy statement that does not encourage school district growth beyond the Lincoln city limits, but allows the district to accept property assigned to it which will eventually be a part of metropolitan Lincoln.

The board delayed action on a request by Marvin Churchill to freehold transfer of his Cheney district property into the Lincoln District.

Under the petition division plan, Churchill's property would become part of the Norris School District. Currently Churchill's two children attend Lincoln schools under rules which allow children in Class I districts to chose between larger neighboring school districts for secondary school.

Board members also heard a report on the newly developed curriculum for teaching writing and a current search for instructional materials in the teaching of spelling, handwriting and composition.

The composition curriculum, developed last year, is being used by 21 target schools and wilal eventually become a part of every Lincoln school, explained Ruth Ann Lyness, English consultant for the district.

The curriculum outlines skills that should be taught at each grade level from kindergarten through 12th grades.

It stresses three forms of writing — informative (to record information or convey factual knowledge), elicitive (to persuade or direct) and expressive (to use imagination to develop or convey feelings, insights or ideas).

"Good things have been happening all these years in writing. They just haven't been formalized," Ms. Lyness said.

The curriculum guide includes skills which should be taught at grade levels. For example, kindergarten through third grade writing objectives include the simple mechanics of capitalization and punctuation, writing a sentence, a social letter, copying information and locating information in reference materials.

Senior high objectives include the mechanics of punctuation and spelling and involves more complex skills such as using rhythmic devices and different methods of organizing information.

"I hope the media and the public gives this as much attention as they did putting away the trampolines," said board member Stan Linnertz.

After pressure from parents of high school gymnasts, the board reconsidered last month's decision to remove all trampolines from schools.

Insurance was purchased to cover high school gymnasts through the late November district meet this year at a cost of $2,500. Insurance stipulations include having 8 spotters and the coach during all practices and use by only competing gymnasts, according to Bob Den Hartog, associate superintendent for business affairs.

Board members raised salaries of beginning food service and school aide persons to meet the Jan. 1 minimum wage of $2.65. The total cost to the district for this school year will be more than $9,000.

The rising minimum wage has strong implications for federally funded programs, said Prasch. Federal money for such programs as Head Start and Follow Through is the same each year, while the costs, including salaries, rise about 7% to 8% every year, he said.

Bread Fair winners told

Mrs. Robert Burton Tuesday took top honors in the Nebraska Art Association's Third annual Bread Fair which attracted some 50 entries.

Those entering the contest, sponsored by the Art Association in cooperation with the Wheat Division of the Nebraska Department of Agriculture, had to submit five loaves of the same type — one to be judged and the other four to be sold.

Other prize-winners were:

DeAnn Pike, white loaf; Sidna Hazen, wheat loaf; Mrs. Burton, nationality; Donald Steinegger, men only; Shelli McDevitt, youth; Anne E. Farmer, most unusual; Donnie Epp, sweet loaf; Mrs. Val Sypal of Brainard, dinner rolls and kolaches, and Elma Homze, fruit and nut.

MAPA regains funds from Douglas County

Omaha (UPI) — The Douglas County Board has decided to give back to the Metropolitan Area Planning Agency 60% of the funding it took away early last month.

In a unanimous vote Tuesday, the board agreed to provide $120,000 this fiscal year for the regional planning agency.

Commissioner Michael Albert said other counties supporting the agency also have agreed to cut their contributions by 40%.

The Douglas County Board voted Oct. 4 to withhold funds from MAPA until an audit and an organizational study could be done.

Douglas County commissioners had been disturbed that the county was paying two-thirds of the local operating costs of MAPA, but has only one of nine votes on the board of directors.

The MAPA Board agreead informally Monday that only elected officials should serve on the board. That would result in dropping the chairmen of the Omaha and Council Bluffs Planning Goards.

However, the directors were unable to agree on the composition of a new board.

Potential Lincoln school sites suggested by Supt. Prasch

Not every piece of land owned by the Lincoln Public Schools will become a future school site, according to Supt. John Prasch.

The district buys land in areas that are potential growth neighborhoods, but changing circumstances often means changed plans.

The problem, according to Prasch, is that "parcels bought in the past come to be identified as potential sites by the public."

Prasch identified the 13 parcels owned by the district and described potential school growth areas during the Tuesday board meeting. About 180 potential school sites have been identified on Lincoln's periphery, Prasch said.

Prasch suggested that a Superior Street site, between 10th and 27th Sts., would be the best choice for the next northern elementary school. Children from the new Highlands North subdivision would be bused to Superior until the numbers warranted a neighborhood school in that area. Currently Highland children are bused to Claire McPhee.

He also suggested acquiring northern property to replace land sold when the Tabitha Village began development.

Prasch also predicted that a junior high will be needed in west Lincoln before one is needed in Lincoln's eastern edge.

Different sites than are now owned also will be needed on Lincoln's eastern edge and the system should be looking at sites in the far east, far south and one in the Cheney area, he said.

Yearbook contracts are cited

Omaha (AP) — An attorney general's opinion says some parts of contracts between high schools and yearbook photographers are violating Nebraska's antitrust laws.

The contracts mentioned in the opinion involved some Omaha School District high schools and a few others around the state.

The disputed contract provision lets the photographer pay a rebate to the school's yearbook fund for photos bought by students for their own use, said David Pederson, attorney for the school board.

The issue was raised in June when an Omaha photographer complained about the arrangements between schools and yearbooks.

One member of trio bound over in kidnapping, robbery case

Kimball (AP) — Timothy P. McConnell, 20, was bound over to district court Tuesday for trial on kidnapping and armed robbery charges.

Kimball County Court Judge Kenneth Fritzler set bond at $10,000 cash. McConnell is being held in the Kimball County jail.

McConnell is one of three persons charged with the Oct. 30 robbery of the I-80 Mart south of Kimball and the abduction of a store employee, Rhonda Rolph, 16.

Arraignment for the other suspects, Craig Montgomery, 22, and his wife, Mary Kathleen, 20, was delayed because of Nebraska's first winter storm of the season. Mrs. Montgomery, who is being held in Scottsbluff; was unable to make it to Kimball and one of the attorneys involved in the case also was unable to drive to Kimball.

Police said Tuesday they still do not know the addresses of the three suspects.

Request delays kidnap hearing for Williams

A preliminary hearing for Robert E. Williams on charges that he kidnapped his wife at knifepoint was postponed Tuesday because Williams requested a change in attorneys.

Williams was scheduled for a hearing Thursday in Lancaster County Court on kidnapping charges. But Judge Robert Camp delayed that hearing until Dec. 22 after allowing attorney Leonard Dunker to withdraw from the case at Williams' request.

Camp appointed the public defender's office, which is handling charges of murder and rape against Williams, to take over this case also.

Williams, 40, was charged on Aug. 9 with kidnapping his wife Marilee. Two days later, two Lincoln women were found dead in a north Lincoln duplex and a third told police she was raped by a man matching Williams' description.

72 Nebraska dams rated 'high hazard'

Omaha (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said Tuesday that 72 dams in Nebraska and 28 in Iowa have a "high hazard" rating, but that they are not in danger of collapsing.

The corps also lists 424 dams in Nebraska and 40 in Iowa as having a "significant hazard" rating.

Every dam in the state is ranked and placed on a list, a spokesman for the corps said, explaining that the rating are based on either a high or significant potential for death and destruction if the dams collapsed.

The ratings were begun after state officials examined the dams and their possible effects on persons and property located downstream.

Although ratings have already been made, they are not based on study of the design, construction or maintenance, items to be studied later with money from Congress.

Most of the dams are in the hands of private owners, such as irrigators, power districts, cities and other agencies and are inspected by state officials every year.

The corps also said that it inspects its own dams regularly, including two Papio dams northwest of Omaha and the large mainstem dams on the Missouri River near Yankton, S.D.

The Nebraska ratings are made by the State Department of Water Resources, a spokesman for the corps said, adding that the two Papio dams are as safe as they can be made.

Democrat urges support for farm strike, parity

Wayne (UPI) — The founder of the Democratic Party's farm-oriented Breadbasket Conference Tuesday urged party endorsement of the proposed Dec. 14 farm strike to achieve 100 percent of parity.

"The small family farmer in the Midwest is in grave difficulty," said Allen O'Donnell of Wayne. "Many are threatened with loss of their land. I urge the Democratic Party to support 100 percent parity — now."

O'Donnell, Nebraska Democratic national committeeman, sent telegrams to Breadbasket Conference members in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Kansas urging their support for the strike.

In addition, O'Donnell urged support for gasohol and asked the conference members to convene in either Des Moines or Minneapolis Dec. 16.17 to "discuss farm and related problems looking towards the 1978 election year."

O'Donnell said gasohol was a "means of helping the farmer overcome excess production and to help the energy problem facing this country."

Concerning the proposed farm strike, O'Donnell, a Wayne State College professor, said during the Ford and Nixon administrations Democrats called for 90 percent of parity.

"We should at least remain constant," O'Donnell said. "We elected a farmer to the White House who promised and did select a farmer as secretary of agriculture.

"Farmers' hopes were raised during the campaign. Now we find our small family farmers in grave danger. This danger adds up to the real possibility of fewer but larger farms and a greater concentration of wealth in agriculture."

O'Donnell said the nation's farmers were only asking for a "dollar's pay for a dollar's work. They deserve that much."

He said the Breadbasket Conference was formed last summer to "give a strong voice to the Midwest farm states."

"Farmers never had a strong voice in the past," O'Donnell said. "But they have one now."

Hall County landfill relocation held up by court order

Grand Island (UPI) — Hall County District Judge L. W. Kelly Jr. Tuesday issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting Hall County from condemning 80 acres of land six miles northwest of Grand Island for a county landfill.

Kelly acted on a complaint filed by Vermoyne Wiese, who farms the land, and set a Nov. 18 hearing date for temporary injunction arguments.

The county board voted Sept. 27 to condemn the property, but Wiese said the land constitutes half his farm and he would suffer "irrepairable harm" if he lost it to a landfill.

In addition, Wiese claimed there were other sites available, the county board selected his land as the site well in advance of a public hearing and failed to consider the economic impact it would have on his farming operation.

Wiese alleged the county has failed to negotiate for the land as required by state law and to properly authorize eminent domain proceedings.

The proposed site would replace 20 acres southwest of Alda that the county has used as a landfill for the past several years.

At the end of September, officials said one month's use was left at the Alda site but it is still being used.

Alliance citizens win jury probe

Alliance (AP) — The first grand jury in Box Butte County in 64 years will be convened in District Court Jan. 30, Judge Robert Moran ruled Tuesday.

Moran, ruling on the application of the Alliance Concerned Citizens for a grand jury investigation of city affairs, ordered the clerk of court to prepare a list to be used in selection of jurors.

Moran ruled that the requirements for the proper number of signatures on the petitions had been met and said the former requirements of specifiying criminal allegations have been satisfied.

The petitions charge city officials with various crimes, including misappropriation and misapplication of funds, improper maintenance and utilization of the municipal power plant and malfeasance for incurring liabilities in excess of amounts authorized by law.

The petitions do not specify whether the charges are made against present or past city officials.

St. Mary's president is stepping down

Omaha (UPI) — The president of the College of Saint Mary, Nebraska's only all-women's college, has announced her resignation no later than December of next year.

Sister Mary Angelica Costello cited the pressures of a college president and the need for new thinking and direction for CSM as the reasons for her resignation submitted Monday. She has been president nearly eight years.

"I think the college has a good future," Sister Angelica said. "It is academically strong and plans are on the drawing board to make the College of Saint Mary a real center of learning for women."

Sister Angelica, a Grand Island native, was appointed to the CSM English department in 1954 after an extensive teaching career at schools in Lincoln, Chadron, Omaha and Denver.

Curtis declines Russian press invitation

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., said Tuesday he has turned down an invitation to appear on a Russian television panel next March.

In a letter to Valentin Zorin, president of the Moscow Press Club, Curtis said next year would be his last year in Congress and there were many things he hoped to accomplish.

Curtis will retire at the end of his current term.

"I do not believe that I should be away during my last session of Congress for the trip," Curtis wrote.

Farmers borrowing against land

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

More farmers are borrowing money from the Federal Land Bank Association of Lincoln, but the size of the loans is getting smaller.

Burdette Swanson, president of the association, told members attending the annual banquet in Lincoln Tuesday night this means more farmers are refinancing by borrowing against their land.

"Land sales are declining in our area," he said.

"We are finding that more of the land in the area we serve is being owned by the owner-operator and less by the non-farm investor," Swanson said. "I think that the non-farm investor has moved west into the land that is being developed for irrigation."

Swanson said that as a result of this shift in ownership, land values in the Lincoln area tend to be more stable than in other areas. "I would say that the general trend is level to slightly higher in this immediate area," he said.

"One thing will force down the price of land. If farmers keep talking about land values going down, then they will go down," he said.

"There is ample credit available for agriculture in this area," he said.

Swanson acknowledged that some farmers are in trouble due to drought, bad cattle prices and over-expansion of land ownership, but noted that only one loan went bad in the past year.

"The farmers are working hard at keeping their debts paid up. Very few will be forced into liquidation," he predicted.

Swanson warned that the association is taking a close look at income tax statements and demands cash flow statements on all loans.

Ralph Raikes, chairman of the federal Land Bank District Board, said the past year has seen the greatest demand for loan money in the district's history. "The total loans outstanding are at $2.5 billion, double what it was five years ago," he said. "The federal farm credit system now provides about 40% of the credit to the nation's farmers."

"It is true that for some young farmers it is impossible to get started, but our association has also been able to help many young farmers start their operations," he said. "Many of them are doing a lot better than some of you think."

The Lincoln association has 151 loans compared to 113 last year, with $11,782,-900 in new loans this year compared to $10,150,500 last year.

The association has 1,066 outstanding loans compared to 1,039 a year ago. Outstanding loans total $39,282,764 compared to $32,150,365 a year ago.

Cariaga solo renditions strong

By Richard Grace

Review

Marvellee Cariaga was the featured guest soloist with the Lincoln Symphony Tuesday evening at O'Donnell Auditorium. Under the baton of Robert Anders Emile, the singer and orchestra performed works by Mozart, Ravel and Wagner. Miss Cariaga, a talent unknown to this reviewer, sang the Sheherezade Songs of Ravel and "Dich, teure Halle" from "Tannhaeuser" and the "Liebestod" from "Tristan und Isolde" by Wagner.

Miss Cariaga describes her voice as mezzo-soprano, although that point could be debated for one with such a large voice.

The Ravel songs are probably best suited for a mezzo, although Ravel did not distinguish anything except voice and orchestra in his score. But these songs did not completely get off the ground. There were some lovely moments, to be sure, but on the whole the work sounded studied and lacked the verve and excitement usually found in these three highly literary songs. Perhaps adding to the problem was that the singer looked ill at ease by using a score, and that the balance between singer and orchestra (especially in her lower register) left something to be desired.

When Miss Cariaga returned after intermission to sing the two Wagner arias, she sounded like a person who then was in her proper element. Here the full-blown, dramatic qualities were portrayed, and Miss Cariaga gave a strong self-assured display of her fine talent.

Many principal players were featured in the pure orchestral works of the concert. A delightful piece of Mozart titled "Serenata Notturna in D" used the string section and typmani. The composition utilized the Baroque concerto grosso practice of a quintet of soloists within the tutti sections. Violinists Arnold Schatz, Brenda Manuel and Patricia Morrow, cellist Priscilla Parson, and George Work, double-bass, were the soloists in this enjoyably piece. The orchestra also played two well-known works of Wagner — the prelude to "Tristan und Isolde" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" from "Die Gotterdamerung." David Kappy and the horn section did some fine playing in this concluding work of the evening.

Health board delays action on pools

By Joe Hudson
Star Staff Writer

Action on a proposed city swimming pool ordinance was delayed Tuesday night by the Lincoln-Lancaster County Board of Health.

The board decided not to act on the ordinance, which is stricter than existing state statutes, until expected objections of motel and apartment operators are heard.

Board member Bob Colin said an attorney for a lodging accommodations association was supposed to appear before the board at Tuesday's meeting, but the attorney didn't show.

According to health department officials, the proposed local ordinance, with an accompanying resolution, differs from state law in that:

—Local law would require that fencing around motel and apartment pools (Class B pools) be a minimum height of six feet, unless an existing fence is at least four feet high. Existing fencing built to meet the state minimum is 3½ feet high.

—All pools would be required to have auxiliary lights which would function in case of a power failure.

—Class B pools would be required to have on the premises at all times at least one person certified in basic life support training.

—All pools would be required to be under the immediate supervision of a licensed pool operator, trained in such things as safety and water chemistry. Under state law, Class B pools are exempt from this requirement.

The board passed a new set of environmental and sanitary standards for schools outside Lincoln in Lancaster County. New areas covered by the standards include ventilation, individual room light intensity, school housekeeping, shops and chemistry labs and shower facilities.

In other action, the board:

—Appointed Mrs. Beatrice Kleis, 6520 Sumner St., to the Food Advisory Committee.

—Agreed to a restructuring of the Dental Advisory Committee, which has been plagued with low attendance at meetings.

—Approved an already-budgeted contract with the Region V Alcoholism Advisory Council for $68,670 for detoxification services.

Convicted murderer wants freedom; claims confession was involuntary

Convicted murderer Booker L. Robinson has asked the U.S. District Court to let him out of prison because he says a confession he gave to police was not made voluntarily.

Robinson was convicted in July 1976 of shooting Archie Robinson over a marijuana swindle. Both men were from Omaha but were not related.

In his motion for habeas corpus, Robinson said the statement he gave authorities was procured by a promise of medical aid. Robinson was a heroin addict and has said he was going through withdrawal during his questioning.

The Nebraska Supreme Court ruled last summer that Robinson's statements were voluntarily made and admissible in court under the Miranda ruling.

U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom ordered Robinson's motion filed without cost, because Robinson said he did not have the money to pay an attorney. Urbom ordered the state to respond to Robinson's claims.

Motor vehicle homicide case decided

A 26-year-old Lincoln man has been found guilty of motor vehicle homicide in the March 1977 death of Victor Johnson of Martell.

James B. Sommers, 1820 S.W. 12th, was convicted of causing Johnson's death during an accident on the 10th Street viaduct.

The viaduct was icy when the pickup truck Sommers was driving collided with Johnson's car. Johnson, 19, died shortly after the accident.

The county attorney's office charged Sommers had more than .10 percent alcohol in his bloodstream at the time of the accident. Sommers' attorney contended the accident was caused by the icy conditions.

The penalty for motor vehicle homicide is a fine of up to $500 or six months in jail, or both. If drunk driving is involved, however, the defendant may receive one to 10 years in prison.

District Judge William Hastings ordered a presentence investigation.

Umbrella gets blame in car-pedestrian mishap

An umbrella was apparently partially to blame for a car-pedestrian accident Tuesday night that left a 72-year-old Lincoln woman in fair condition at Lincoln General Hospital.

Rose C. Gardner, 228 S. 17th St., #221, suffered a broken leg and bruises when struck by a car at 13th and H Sts., police said.

She was crossing 13th Street during a rainstorm when struck by a westbound car driven by L. Bradley Hurrell, 26, of 3831 Prescott, police said. She told police her umbrella blocked her view of the oncoming car.

Hickman official reluctant to begin chlorination

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

The village of Hickman may not begin chlorinating its water on a regular basis, despite a recommendation by the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Department that it do so.

Hickman village board Chairman David Hunter said Tuesday that the board has "not yet decided what to do" about the possibility of bacterial contamination in the village water supply.

The health department is recommending that every community water supply in Lancaster County be chlorinated to avoid a scare such as Hickman experienced on Oct. 27 when its water tested high in coliform bacteria.

After taking 17 samples at various places in the village last Thursday, the contamination was traced to Hickman's water tower. A manhole atop the tower was found to have been left open.

The water in the tower was chlorinated Friday, bringing the coliform count down to an acceptable level, Health Director Dr. E. D. Lyman told the county board Tuesday.

Hunter appeared before the board to urge an investigation of health department sampling techniques and methods of notifying communities about water problems.

Hunter said he felt reluctant to begin regular chlorination because "I wouldn't want to put anything in the water unless it's absolutely necessary."

Lyman told the board that routine chlorination "on all occasions" is the best way to avoid contamination.

A majority of small community water supplies in Nebraska are not chlorinated, Lyman noted. In other states, such as Kansas, chlorination of all public water is required by state law, he said. Nebraska has no such law.

Hunter gave the county board a letter from the Hickman village board asking Commissioner Bob Colin to publicly retract statements he made last Friday criticising Hunter's handling of the emergency.

Colin said Friday Hunter had caused "unnecessary concern and inconvenience, as well as embarrassment . . . to the residents of Hickman" by overreacting to a "form letter" warning the village of the high bacteria count.

Hunter issued a warning through the news media for all residents to boil or disinfect their drinking water. The next day he accused the health department of improper sampling techniques, since one of the samples came from a faucet with a dirty screen.

Hunter said Tuesday that "within 10 minutes after I got the word (about the test results) I was in (Public Health Administrator) Ray Solee's office" asking Sollee how to respond to the problem.

"I got no answers," Hunter said. Sollee told Hunter the decision was entirely up to the village as to how to react to the test findings, Hunter said.

Hunter said the village board had no choice but to alert the public to possible danger.

At a press conference on Oct. 28, Hunter accused the health department of negligence, and suggested that the Hickman locker plant file suit against the department because the scare had forced it to close down for six hours.

Colin said Tuesday that he still feels Hunter was "stepping a little out of bounds" in making this statement.

"We're looking to see if there's any scientific reason" for revising testing procedures, to avoid the possibility of a dirty faucet screen, Sollee said.

Lyman made it clear, however, that Hickman's water tested high in bacteria even after the dirty screen was removed.

Colin made no official retraction of his earlier statements about Hunter. He asked Hunter to apologize to the citizens of Hickman for using "poor judgment" in the matter; Hunter declined to make an apology, saying the decision was made by the entire board on the advice of the village attorney.

Colin, a Republican, is up for reelection to the county board next year, and is expected to seek another term. Hunter, a Democrat, has indicated his intention to file for Colin's seat.

"I'm not trying to make a political game out of this," Hunter said.

The county board took no action on the matter. Chairman Bruce Hamilton said he appreciated Hunter's bringing his concerns to the board's attention.

Millard school addition OKd

Omaha (UPI) — The Millard School Board approved plans to construct a $1.2 million addition to Millard High School.

The addition would increase the capacity of the building from 1,400 students to about 2,000. About 1,900 students attend the school.

Ring around the sausage.

Polish ring sausage and kraut in a meal that's a real bell ringer! Or try pork and/or ribs.

(Serves 4). 27 oz. Frank's Quality Kraut, drained, 1 t. basil, ½ t. celery seed, 1 lb. Polish ring sausage, 3 T. brown sugar, ½ cup hot water. Mix kraut, basil and celery seed in a casserole. Make deep cuts in sausage about 1 inch apart, pushing it into kraut mixture half way. Dissolve brown sugar in water and dribble over casserole. Bake covered at 350° for 1 hour. Nursing home records probe begun

United Press International

The Social Security Administration and the Douglas County Attorney's Office have started criminal investigations into the loss of personal accounts of 42 patients at the Orchard Hill Nursing Home in Omaha.

The nursing home was closed by the state this summer, and personal accounts totaling an estimated $5,000 are missing. The exact figure is unknown because individual records on the patient accounts have not been found.

Attempts to contact Orchard Hill owner and administrator James A. Cummins of Omaha have been unsuccessful. Creditors and welfare officials said they have found it difficult to contact him.

State and local welfare officials say they are stymied by a lack of laws governing the personal accounts.

Each month, nursing home patients keep $25 of their Social Security checks to pay for personal items. In most cases, the funds are turned over to the nursing home administrator for care and disbursement.

The administrators are required to keep separate accounts for each patient, according to state Welfare Director Eldin Ehrlich, William Page, director of the Licensure and Standards Division in the state Health Department, and officals of the Nursing Home Association.

Ehrlich and Richard Witcig of the Lincoln Social Security Office say the administrators are required to keep separate accounts for each patient.

They do not know what happened in the Orchard Hill case or other similar situations.

The federal government has jurisdiction if the Social Security checks were cashed by Cummins, Witcig said. However, if the checks were signed over by the parient and the $25 given to the adminstrator, he said, it is a matter for local officials.

Eugene Wandel of Fremont, the former Orchard Hill owner, who has reclaimed the property through foreclosure action against Cummins, has tried to piece together what happened.

"I know it had to be more than $5,000," Wandel said, "But he (Cummins) simply didn't keep any records.

The lack of financial records was confirmed by state Welfare Department officials, who said Orchard Hill documents from an Omaha accountant show no record of the personal accounts.

Ehrlich and other state officials stressed that 95 percent of 99 percent of Nebraska's nursing homes accurately and honestly account for every dollar.

Man charged with 2 felonies

Bellevue, (AP) — Vern E. VanMaanen, 33, has been charged with two felonies in connection with a traffic accident last Saturday in which a teenager was critically hurt.

Sarpy County Judge Jeffrey Campbell set bond at $10,000 Monday for VanMaanen, who is charged with leaving the scene of a personal injury accident and a third offense of driving while intoxicated.

VanMaanen is accused of being the driver of a pickup truck which hit Jeffrey Jenney, 13, while the boy was riding his bicycle. Jeffrey was listed in critical condition Tuesday at Midlands Hospital.

'Derangement' caused by lead denied

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — A British physician became the first witness in a $3-million damage suit involving a worker in a lead smelting plant to deny previous testimony that exposure to lead fumes caused a condition of mental derangement.

Dr. Ronald E. Lane, said Tuesday that while lead can cause bodily illness, in his opinion the mental state of Edward Bartunek of Omaha was not caused by lead.

Lane was the first defense witness in the second week of a federal court suit brought by the state of Bartunek's wife, Diana Kay.

The Bartunek woman died in 1974 after being stabbed by her husband. The suit, filed in behalf of her estate and the couple's six children, seeks damages from the American Smelting and Refining Co. Inc., an Omaha lead smelting firm.

The suit alleges that Bartunek became mentally deranged while working for ASARCO due to occupational lead exposure and that this condition resulted in him killing his wife. Bartunek worked for ASARCO for 12 years.

Dr. Lane's testimony disagreed with previous evidence presented by experts on the topic of lead contamination. Four previous witnesses concluded that there was a causal relationship between the lead Bartunek ingested and his mental condition at the time of his wife's death.

"This poor patient appeared to be suffering from a mental illness," Lane said, "and there was no evidence from the data I had . . . that he was suffering from lead poisoning."

Lane dismissed figures on the amount of lead found in Bartunek's system as being fairly average for a lead worker and not necessarily of any medical concern.

Lane said that smaples taken at the ASARCO refinery were taken on a hit-and-miss basis and probably didn't reflect any real relationship to lead ingested by workers.

Lane also disagreed with an earlier witness on how obviously ill a person with lead poisoning is. He said that a person as seriously ill as Bartunek was thought to be wouldn't be able to function normally at all.

A second witness summoned by ASARCO attorney's Dr. James J. Chisolm of Baltimore, Md., agreed with Lane on all major points.

Lane published a series of lead guidelines currently being used by the lead industry, while Chisolm is a national consultant to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Under cross-examination by Martin Cannon, attorney for the plaintiff, both Lane and Chisolm admitted that some of their research work has been funded by lead-related industries.

Market's rally subsides

Dow Ind. —0.17

New York (AP) — The stock market's recent rally subsided Tuesday in a mixed and quiet Election Day session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen 15.59 points in the last three trading days, slipped back .17 to 816.27.

But gainers held a 7-5 edge on losers in the daily tally at the New York Stock Exchange, and the NYSE's composite index managed a .11 advance to 50.78.

Brokers said activity was held down by the closing of some banks and other business offices as numerous state and local elections were held across the country.

The market opened higher amid encouragement over General Motors' declaration of a record fourth quarter dividend late Monday. GM voted a quarterly payout of $3.25 a share, including an increase in the "regular" dividend from 85 cents to $1.

The action, which brought GM's payments this year to $6.80 a share, was seen as an expression of confidence by the nation's second largest industrial corporation.

But the Dow, up more than a point at the outset, slipped to the minus side by mid-morning.

Analysts said traders who evidently remained concerned about the economic outlook took the recent upswing in the market as an opportune occasion to do some selling.

GM stock, which climbed 1½ on Monday, was up another ¼ to 69 as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE. The issue led the active list on turnover of better than 460,000 shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials picked up .15 to 101.75, and S&P's 500-stock composite index rose .17 to 92.46.

American Telephone & Telegraph, which plans a 12 millionshare offering later this week, gained ¼ to 59⅝.

Interstate United jumped 2½ to 9¾ to post the day's biggest percentage gain. The diversified food service concern said a subsidiary of a British company planned a $10-a-share offer for its stock.

Four youths face burglary charges

Four Lincoln youths have been bound over to Lancaster County District Court to face charges stemming from the burglaries of area schools.

All four have been scheduled for arraignment on Nov. 10.

Joseph Smisek, 16, of 340 No. 28th, is charged with three counts of burglary. His brother Kevin, 18, of 421 N.W. 18th, faces two burglary counts. Kevin Howard, 18, of 421 N.W. 18th, faces three burglary counts, and Larry Hall, 17, of the same address, faces one count.

Hospital cost-cutting fails

Washington (AP) — A multimillion-dollar program to cut hospital costs paid by Medicare and Medicaid has not saved money or reduced the length of time patients remain in hospitals, a federal study released Tuesday showed.

The Professional Standards Review Organization program "is not now cost effective," according to the report by the Health Services Administration.

The program, still being set up, will cost $268.5 million a year when fully implemented, the report said. The government spent about $100 million to set up organizations for the review of cases in fiscal 1977 and expects to spend $140 million in fiscal 1978.

Congress created the program in 1972 to hold down costs in federal health care programs by eliminating unnecessary services. The law requires that a group of voluntary, nonprofit physicians review Medicare and Medicaid cases and decide what services are unnecessary.

The nation was divided into 203 review organization areas. As of August, there were 108 conditional review organizations in their first two years of operation and 64 in the planning stage, with others expected to form by the end of next year.

The study found the average cost of reviewing each patient's case was $16 to $18.31. Only seven of 18 review organizations studied achieved reductions in hospital says.

Sóme data indicated review organizations shortened stays slightly for Medicare patients, but had an opposite effect on Medicaid patients.

The study said that to recover its costs, the review organizations program would have to reduce overall hospitalization by 1.6 percent to 2.05 percent.

It said, "Modest reductions in hospital occupancy rates . . . produced little if any reduction in staffing and fixed costs."

The government currently spends a total of $47 billion on Medicare and Medicaid.

Lawn mower trip cut short

Osteen, Fla. (AP) — It was a good try, they figured. After all, 250 miles in a lawn mower going at a top speed of 5 miles per hour is nothing to sneeze at.

Betty Miller and her 22-year-old son Donnie were back home Tuesday after giving up on their attempted 800-mile journey to Horse Cave, Ky., aboard their power mower.

Mother and son, who set out from this central Florida community a week ago, stopped over in Valdosta, Ga., Monday to try to persuade the mower's manufacturing representative to sponsor their epic journey. They failed.

"We spent about $200," Mrs. Miller said. "I didn't figure it would cost more than $300."

Prep Panorama

A status symbol

Lincoln Southeast could have grumbled a bit about playing Friday night's Class A state championship football game on the AstroTurf at UNO's Al Caniglia Field.

After all, title foe Creighton Prep has played both its playoff games against Ralston and Papillion on UNO's artificial surface.

Southeast, though, is too classy to shout injustice. The Knights, in fact, view their AstroTurf debut as a status symbol.

"Every one of our players is excited about it," Southeast coach Frank Solich says. "They watch the colleges and the pros play on it. They look on it as a real treat."

Southeast isn't going into the game completely cold about the strange bounces a ball takes on AstroTurf or the way to adjust the starts, stops and cuts.

The Knights worked out on Nebraska's AstroTurf Tuesday afternoon and hope to get at least one more short workout on the artificial grass before the curtain goes up against Prep.

No backing in

Hampton football coach Jim Connick came up with the classic playoff quip this week while preparing for Friday afternoon's eight-man state championship showdown with Adams.

"If we win," he says, "nobody can say we backed in."

If the top-ranked Hawks pull it off, they will have snapped a combined 85-game winning streak in the short span of 11 days.

Hampton's 22-16 first round win ended a 21-game Trumbull winning streak. The Hawks' 30-14 semifinal triumph also terminated a 21-game Madrid Wheatland winning streak. Now, Hampton faces Adams and its all-time state record 43-game winning streak.

While Adams has prospered with a 60-1 record the past six football seasons, Hampton hasn't exactly been struggling . . . not with a 53-5 record during the same six seasons.

Hampton's chance to spoil an all-time winning streak is ironic. Just three years ago, the Hawks tied Nebraska's all-time prep basketball winning streak of 51 games, then lost to Paxton in the opening round of the state tournament.

Beating Adams won't wipe out the frustration of that historical loss, but it would have a soothing effect.

Battle of brothers

Imagine the supper table conversations this week between the Leiss brothers of Republican Valley and the Rohde brothers of Ansley.

They're the chief offensive weapons advancing their teams to the state Class C-2 championship game Friday night at McCook.

Dean Leiss has hit 15 of 22 passes for 219 yards and two touchdowns in the first two games of the playoffs. He has passed for 855 yards on the season. Not bad for a sophomore quarterback who missed one game.

Dennis, a senior and a Sunday Journal and Star preseason all-state end, has helped make his younger brother look good. He has caught 32 passes for 633 yards and eight touchdowns on the season and has snagged seven for 173 yards and a TD in the playoffs.

The Rohde brothers have been on an even bigger rampage. Shane, a senior tailback, has 30 carries in the playoffs for 295 yards rushing and three touchdowns. He has 1,112 yards for the season.

Brother Phil, a junior fullback, has crunched two playoff opponents under an avalanche of 27 carries for 215 yards and nine touchdowns, an obvious state playoff record. He entered the playoffs with only 519 yards rushing.

Phil now has 20 touchdowns and 130 points this season. Shane has 18 TD's and 122 points.

With two Leisses and two Rohdes contributing that much action on the same field, pity the poor radio announcer calling Friday night's play-by-play. If he twists his tongue more than once and calls the wrong brother, please forgive him.

We all deserve a break this time of year.

Nebraska can't look past KU contest

Virgil Parker

Sports Editor

Tom Osborne said it. "I'm sure the fans and the press will overlook the Kansas game and be looking ahead to Oklahoma and a possible bowl bid. But we, the coaches and players, can't afford to do that."

The Cornhusker coach is right on both counts. Hopefully, while the rest of us speculate on how tough the Sooners will be in Norman and which bowl game we're going to, Osborne and the players will concentrate on the Jayhawks.

You can even make a case for how tough Kansas will be. I've not seen anybody else yet remind that KU beat Washington State this fall. That's something the Huskers couldn't do.

Does that mean I think the Jayhawks could win here Saturday? Anything "could" happen, the way this topsy-turvy collegiate season has gone so far.

But, never fear. The Huskers will prevail and the stage will be set for the annual shootout against Oklahoma.

A lot of bowl speculation has already been discussed in this space. The question which keeps coming up is this: In past years, when the Huskers came right down to the wire for the Big Eight title with the Sooners, the loser was an attractive team to the other two available "major" post-season games — the Sugar and Cotton Bowls. Why not his year?

Just as the Orange Bowl has a tieup with the Big Eight champion, the SEC champ goes to the Sugar and the SW titlist to the Cotton.

Alabama has already clinched the host spot in the Sugar Bowl. They wouldn't want to take a chance of a rematch with Nebraska — or maybe even worse, a game against a team Nebraska had also beaten (Oklahoma.)

By the same count, the Cotton Bowl wouldn't want to face the possibility of a rematch between Oklahoma and Texas, the likely host team for their game.

The problem is that the bowl bids will go out a week from Saturday — prior to the Nebraska-Oklahoma game.

The Huskers and Sooners are going to have to agree ahead of time which bowl and loser will go to. Why? Look at it from a practical standpoint. Let's say the Sooners would prefer the Gator Bowl if they can't go to the Orange, but Nebraska would rather go to the Sun Bowl if they don't win the "big" game with OU.

Sounds fine on the surface. But none of the top teams will sit around waiting for a possible open spot. By the time the Gator finds out it doesn't have Oklahoma or the Sun discovers it can't have Nebraska (because one or the other will get the Orange Bowl), they're out in the cold with nobody.

The only practical approach is for both Nebraska and Oklahoma to agree that if they don't go to the Orange Bowl they'll accept a bid from the - - - Bowl. (Fill in proper name.)

What name? Gator seems the best bet. The Sun would be a possibility, except that it doesn't pay as much money, and the dollar speaks loudly.

Even though bids can't be extended until a week from Saturday, the lineup for the top six paying bowl games seems set already. That's barring some major upsets, of course.

They are:

Rose: USC v. Michigan-Ohio State winner.

Cotton: Texas v. Notre Dame.

Sugar: Alabma V. Michigan-Ohio State loser.

Orange: Oklahoma-Nebraska winner v. Pittsburgh-Penn State winner.

Gator: Oklahoma-Nebraska loser v. Pittsburgh-Penn State loser.

Fiesta: Arizona State v. Arkansas.

On that last one, you might wonder where BYU is going. The Fiesta Bowl is committed to the WAC Conference champ as its host team. But, BYU has already announced it won't go to the Fiesta (if it qualfies) because the game will be played on Sunday.

BYU and Arizona State play this Saturday. The winner is going to be the conference champ, the loser is almost sure to be the runnerup. That means Arizona State gets the Fiesta Bowl nod win or lose this week.

IF BYU wins, they might be a more attractive team for the Gator Bowl against the Nebraska-Oklahoma loser than the loser of the Pittsburgh-Penn State game. But, if Arizona State wins, BYU would seem the logical choice for one of the spots in the Sun Bowl.

Nothing is cut and dried yet. There is still this Saturday. As Nebraska coach Tom Osborne says, "I haven't spent five minutes worrying about the bowl picture yet. The whole thing is very speculative. It's an exercise in futility. We've got to beat Kansas first. If we do, there will be all next week to speculate on the bowl situation."

Lincoln to refuse split year

By Ken Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

Norfolk — The State Fairgrounds in Lincoln will not accept a split horse-racing season for 1978. That was the word here Tuesday night on the eve of a rehearing over the dates assigned by the Nebraska State Racing Commission.

"There is absolutely no way we can race a split season in 1978," said Nebraska State Fair Board Manager Henry Brandt Tuesday night during an informal meeting of the Lincoln, Columbus, and Atokad (South Sioux City) general managers.

The three tracks will present their respective objections to the recently proposed 1978 schedule to the Racing Commission here Wednesday morning at 10 a.m.

"The purpose of this informal meeting tonight (Tuesday) is to present a unified stance of the Lincoln, Columbus and Atokad tracks so we can let the commission know how we feel," said Harold Smock, Atokad general manager.

The three general managers expressed disappointment in the proposed schedule which added seven days to Lincoln's race meeting, scheduling races from July 31 to Aug. 19 and then resuming Sept. 18 to Oct. 7 after 21-day Columbus meet.

"The main problem is an overlap of four days where Atokad and Lincoln would be running consecutively," said Brandt. "Other problems include personnel, a shared starting gate, closed circuit television and horse ambulance between our two tracks.

"We have figured the cost of the split session at $76,382 to set up, tear down and re-set up," Brandt said. "And our board has said we won't do it period."

"We feel we need 25 days to spread out our operating costs and if we are to go through with any plans of expansion in the future," said Agricultural Park General Manager Warren Albert.

Brandt said that the Fair Board will support a proposal of "blocked weeks" as an alternative to the racing commission's proposal.

That plan would include:

—Fonner Park, Feb. 22-April 22, nine weeks, 45 days minimum.

—Ak-Sar-Ben, April 25-July 8, 11 weeks, 55 days minimum.

—Lincoln, July 11-Aug. 26, seven weeks, 35 days minimum.

—Atokad, Oct. 4-Nov. 6,

Kansas JVs cancel game with NU frosh

By Virgil Parker
Sports Editor

Heavy rains changed the Nebraska football team's practice plans Tuesday, but injuries had an even greater effect on Friday's scheduled game between the Cornhusker frosh and the Kansas JVs.

The injuries were to the younger Jayhawk players. As a result, Kansas called off the game.

"This is the fourth or fifth time we've had a team cancel out on us in the last couple of years," Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne said with disgust evident in his voice.

"I wish the Big Eight office could find some way of putting some meaning into the contracts we have with the other schools," Osborne added. "I talked to Bud (Moore, KU coach), and he said they were only able to suit up 22 kids for their JV game with Kansas State and five of them got hurt. Obviously, if they can't field a team, there's nothing we can do about it."

Kansas sports information director Don Baker said 35 members of the Jayhawk's varsity traveling squad which comes to Lincoln Saturday will be comprised of freshman and sophomore players.

Nebraska's injury list for the final home game of the season continues to be a long one as well. Osborne says linebacker James Wightman and I-back Isaiah Hipp are improved and could go Saturday, but middle guard Jeff Pullen and quarterback Tom Sorley are unlikely to play.

"I was disappointed that Kerry Weinmaster and Tom Davis couldn't practice today," Osborne added. "If they can't go tomorrow (Wednesday), we probably won't have them either."

Weinmaster started at middle guard and Davis at center against Missouri last week. With Weinmaster and Pullen both doubtful at the same position, freshman Curt Hineline (6-3, 223, from Bellevue, Wash.) has been working with the varsity this week as a potential backup for Oudious Lee, who played most of the Missouri game.

Because of the inclement weather, Osborne practiced the offense and defense at separate times indoors.

"We had the offense inside for about an hour, then did move them outside for about 40 minutes when the defense reported," the Husker head man reported. "Each group worked about an hour and a half."

Osborne called the practice "satisfactory, but I wouldn't want to be forced inside three or four days in a row. You just can't work on the passing game (which was why the offense went outside for part of the time) and it's tough to prepare the defense properly."

Kansas runs the wishbone, Osborne reminds, "and it's difficult to get a true picture on the pitchouts when you don't have an area as wide as a regular field."

Five-year contract inked by Landry

Dallas (UPI) — Tom Landry, the dean of National Football League coaches, said Tuesday he had signed a five-year contract with the Dallas Cowboys, thus continuing a relationship that has made the franchise one of the most successful in league history.

"I guess you will have to put up with me for five more years," Landry said with a smile. "I'm delighted to have signed this contract. I'm very satisfied with it."

No financial terms were announced.

Landry's previous 11-year agreement expired in 1975 and he has actually worked for 2-½ years for the Cowboys without a signed contract.

"I've always felt that because of the friendship with Mr. Murchison (club owner Clint Murchison) and with Tex (President and General Manager Tex Schramm) it didn't really matter if I had a contract," Landry said.

"The only reason we signed one was because of the legalities involving taxes.

"I guess we never do anything fast. We would talk about a contract during the offseason and then the season would get here and we would be doing something else and when the season ended we took up the talks where we left off the last time."

Landry, the only coach the Cowboys have ever had, has compiled a 145-93-6 record over 17-½ seasons to rank sixth among the all-time winningest NFL coaches. But since the team became a consistent winner in 1967 the Cowboys have gone 120-40-2.

Cox to head up Braves?

Atlanta (AP) — Bobby Cox, first base coach for the New York Yankees, will be named manager of the Atlanta Braves, according to the latest published report.

The Braves deny the report.

The New York Daily News said Tuesday that sources close to the Braves and Cox say the job is his and only awaits official announcement, expected this week.

The official announcement is being delayed because Braves President Ted Turner has scheduled meetings with several applicants and wants to extend them the courtesy of discussing the job with them, the paper said. They are minor league manager Ken Boyer, Atlanta pitcher Phil Niekro and Tommie Aaron, manager of the Braves' farm team at Richmond.

"We have not hired a manager as of this date," Bill Lucas, the Braves general manager, said Tuesday. "As a matter of fact, we are continuing serious interviews for the job. My mind is not made up and to my knowledge, Ted's isn't either."

Huskers 10th, 12th in polls

From Press Reports

Nebraska remained in 10th place in United Press International's college football coaches' poll but dropped from 11th to 12th in Associated Press' college sportswriters and sportscasters poll Tuesday.

The Cornhuksers, 21-10 victors over Missouri Saturday, were demoted one notch to allow Pitt to move ahead of them to 11th spot. Texas A&M is also ranked ahead of NU in the AP poll, but behind the Cornhuskers in the UPI listing.

Oklahoma remained third in both polls, trailing No. 1 Texas and Alabama.

Iowa State, the only other Big Eight school ranked last week, fell out of both wire service polls. The Cyclones, ranked in a tie for 19th by AP and 12th by UPI last week, fell to Colorado, 12-7, Saturday.

With the win, however, Colorado rejoined the UPI listing, placing 15th.

With no major upsets during the past week, the top 10 teams remained the same.

Behind Texas, Alabama and Oklahoma in both listings are Ohio State, Notre Dame and Michigan. Kentucky is ranked 7th by AP. However, the school is on NCAA probation and is not being considered for ranking by UPI. Kentucky's only loss this season has been to Baylor.

Both polls then pick Arkansas, Penn State and Pitt in order to round out the top 10s.

There are several matchups Saturday which pair top-rated ranked teams against each other.

Colorado will be at Oklahoma, while Arkansas hosts Texas A&M; Clemson at Notre Dame and BYU is at Arizona State. Additionally, ranked USC hosts unranked Washington in a game crucial to determining the Pacific Eight championship. Both schools are tied with UCLA for the league lead.

Only 18 teams received votes.

Foster continues Reds' MVP domination

New York (UPI) — George Foster, the quiet man with the big, black bat in the middle of the Cincinnati lineup, Tuesday was named the National League's most valuable player for 1977, the sixth time a Reds player was awarded the honor in the last eight years.

Foster, the first National Leaguer to hit more than 50 homers since his idol Willie Mays 12 years ago, collected 15 of a possible 24 first place ballots in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. He also had nine second place votes for a total of 291 points.

Greg Luzinski of the Philadelphia Phillies, who received the remaining nine first place votes, plus 12 second place ballots, had a total of 255 points to place second. Pittsburgh's Dave Parker was third with 156 points, Los Angeles' Reggie Smith was fourth with 112 points and Philadelphia's Cy Young Award winner Steve Carlton with fifth with 100 points.

Foster, a deeply religious man who will turn 29 in three weeks, captured one of baseball's most prestigious awards with some impressive credentials, including a league-leading 52 home runs, 149 runs batted in and 124 runs scored. He also had a .320 batting average, fourth best in the league.

Only three other men in National League history broke the 50-homer barrier. Hack Wilson set the record with 56 in 1930, Ralph Kiner had 54 in 1949 and Mays had 52 in 1965.

Zisk signs rich contract with Rangers

Arlington, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers, who openly has courted baseball free agent Larry Hisle, announced Tuesday they had wooed Richie Zisk of the Chicago White Sox into signing a long-term contract at a reported $250,000 per year.

Rangers owner Brad Corbett, whose team had been investigated by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for alleged tampering with Hisle while the Minnesota player still was negotiating with the Twins, said Zisk was the man he always wanted.

"I'm pleased to be playing for Texas," Zisk said through his agent, Jerry Kapstein. "They are an outstanding team with great fans. I'm going to do my best to put a world championship pennant over the ballpark in Arlington."

Zisk, the first of the star free agents this year to agree to a contract, was expected in Texas late Tuesday for a meeting with Corbett.

The Rangers had drafted Lyman Bostock, Zisk, Hisle and pitcher Doc Medich in the reentry draft last week after Corbett said that Kuhn's office had indicated to him that there would be reprisals if the Rangers picked Hisle.

Mahoney makes pitch for money

By United Press International

It will take a tremendous infusion of money to help the state Game and Parks Commission meet the variety of outdoor recreational demands of Nebraskans, Eugene Mahoney said Tuesday.

During an appearance before the legislature's consitutional revision and recreation committee, the commission director commended the 1977 Unicameral for being "cognizant of our needs" when it approved several bills that will generate funding for his agency.

But he added it will take considerably more money to get ready for the "crushing crowds" that can be expected to be using state recreational areas and facilities in the next two to five years.

"As we edge into the 1980s, we will find people have more play time than hours at work," Mahoney said.

He said many current facilities need expansion and updating. He noted Indian Cave Park in southeastern Nebraska, a 1 ½-hour drive from Omaha or Lincoln was purchased seven years ago but still lacks many of the improvements invisioned for it.

Asked about the chance of buying more land for recreation in the Omaha area, Mahoney said the current commission thinking is that funds should be utilized to upgrade undeveloped lands it bought there years ago, rather than in acquisition of additional tracts.

He noted purchases in that vicinity would be "very expensive, especially along streams where the affluent like to build cabins."

Mahoney took the occasion to make a mild pitch for LB109, which would impose a small sales tax on soda pop.

"I still think the pop industry would not suffer from it and it would provide the money we need to do the job right," he said.

He said diverting part of the money from the cigarette tax is another potential source of commission income.

If the money were available, Mahoney said, the commission has plans for $30 million in construction over a three-year period.

He also said his agency is losing $760,000 annually because of laws which permit issuance of free hunting and fishing licenses to veterans over 65 and to all persons 70 and older. About 40,000 such permits were issued last year.

"We'd like the replacement dollars, or at least half of them," Mahoney said, adding the money could renovate fishery facilities that are in desperate need or repair.

Several witnesses said they did not want continued expansion of camping facilities to result in encroachment onto lands that are designated for wildlife habitat. They also opposed transfer of lands designated for wildlife into multi-purpose recreational areas.

Mahoney said when the federal government provides matching funds for acquisition of recreational sites, it frequently does so with the understanding that after a specified number of years, the tracts have to be devoted to a "public" rather than a narrow use.

He reiterated there is a "hue and cry" for more camping facilities and the commission must try to accommodate the wishes of the people in that regard.

Lincolnites to see hot serve

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

When Fresno, Calif., tennis pro Chris Sylvan rifles his first serve across the net during Friday's opening of the $4,000 Great Plains Tennis Invitational at the Lincoln Racquet Club, spectators might be careful about the customary turning of the head that accompanies tennis matches.

A Sylvan serve, clocked as the second fastest in the world, is liable to cause whiplash from trying to stay with the ball.

In radar timed competition, Sylvan's serve was clocked at 129 m.p.h., second only to Scott Carnahan at 130.

Not only is Sylvan's serve hot entering the Lincoln event, he just returned from making the quarterfinals in the French Open, upsetting Sweden's No. 2 player behind Bjorn Borg, Oze Bengston, 6-4, 6-0.

Sylvan lost in the quarters 6-3, 6-4 to eventual champion Corrado Barrazzutti who in turn upset Brian Gottfried of the U.S.

While some may look at the fast serve as a novelty, Sylvan looks at it as his bread and butter.

"When it's on, it's great to have," Sylvan said. "My match with Bengston was a prime example. He never had a chance to break serve on me.

"When you step onto the court and people know about the serve, it's a hell of an advantage," he added. "It's an intimidating factor. It just makes a guy wonder when he steps out on the other side of the court."

Sylvan figures he's playing the best tennis of his career right now, but it took a little luck to get him into the French Open field.

"I lost in qualifying and was in what you call a lucky loser position," Sylvan said. "That meant if anyone dropped out, I would have a chance as the second alternate to enter."

Two players did drop out and Sylvan replaced one of the seeded players, giving him a good draw.

"I beat Bengston surprisingly easy," he said. "I won the first set 6-4, and when I was able to close him out 6-0 in the second, it was like a dream. I didn't miss a shot."

Sylvan's success in the French Open in Paris should help him in tournament seeding, but he realizes anything can happen when he steps on the court in Lincoln.

"You've got to be ready at all times," Sylvan said. "I could lose my first match in Lincoln. It's that kind of game. I don't plan on it, but you never know."

Sylvan's road to a possible championship includes barriers like the defending 1976 champion Dale Ogden of Bedford, Tex., and runner-up Woody Blocher of San Marion, Calif.

Also among the early entries were Juan Farrow of St. Louis, the winner of the National Public Parks tournament and Robbie Smith of Asheville, N.C., the top-ranked teaching pro in the nation along with Houston University's Dan Valentincic, the national 21 and under champion.

The tournamnet is scheduled to run Friday, Saturday and Sunday with proceeds going to junior tennis.

Free viewing is offered by the sponsoring Lincoln Tennis Foundation for first round singles at 2:30 p.m. Friday and 8:30 p.m. doubles. On Saturday, viewing will be free from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission will be charged for quarterfinals Saturday and finals Sunday.

Quail, deer seasons will open Saturday

Nebraska's upland game bird hunting picture will be complete Saturday with the opening of the bobwhite quail season throughout the state.

Opportunity for the scattergun-and-bird dog set will be at its peak, since the season on pheasants will also be open. The ringneck season got under way Nov. 5, one week earlier than that on quail.

Prospects appear improved over last year's season. The prime quail range in the southeast is consistently the best bobwhite population from year to year, and 1977 is no exception. The real improvement should be noted in marginal quail range outside the southeast, where bobwhite populations are staging a comeback from a couple of hard winters.

Limits on quail are 6 per day and 18 in possession, and the pheasant limits are 2 cocks per day and six in possession. Shooting hours are 15 minutes before sunrise to sunset.

Saturday also sees the opening of the state's firearm deer season. More than 24,000 permits were issued for deer, and most of the hunters should be in the field at one time or another during the 9-day season. Prospects are good, although a slight decline is anticipated in the whitetail population. Shooting hours for deer are 30 minutes before sunrise to 30 minutes after sunset.

Waterfowl seasons are also open throughout November. Bag and possession limits, closing dates and other regulations vary from one part of the state to another and at different times of the season. However, detailed information on waterfowl and other Nebraska hunting seasons is found in pamphlets available from Game and Parks Commission offices, Conservation Officers, and Permit Vendors. Shooting hours on ducks and geese are 30 minutes before sunrise to sunset.

All hunters in Nebraska must have the proper hunting permit and a Habitat Stamp with them while in the field. Hunters with both small game and deer permits are required to have just one stamp, which must be signed and affixed to one of the licenses. Those with just a deer permit must affix their signed Habitat Stamp to that permit.

Suit possible against NCAA

Oklahoma City (AP) — Yukon banker Clarence Wright and his attorneys continue to prepare a possible lawsuit against the National Collegiate Athletic Association and one of the NCAA's investigators.

"One of the workers at the airport signed an affidavit Saturday and we are in the process of getting affidavits from at least two more persons," Wright, president of the Yukon National Bank in the small town on the western edge of Oklahoma City, said Tuesday.

Wright claims that an investigator for the NCAA obtained illegal entrance to Wright's private plane in October 1975 by misrepresenting himself as a Federal agent.

Wright's attorney, Lana Tyree, said the the affidavit claims that a man came to the airport and "identified himself as a Federal investigator."

"The affidavit is signed by Neal Burgtorf who was an airplane salesman at Wiley Post Airport (Oklahoma City) then," Tyree said.

In the affidavit, Burgtorf said the man identified himself as a Federal agent, a prospective airplane buyer and a representative of an unnamed Florida college at various times while at the airport.

Burgtorf said he became suspicious and refused to talk with the man who then left. Burgtorf said he got the man's automobile tag number and it was traced to a car rental firm at Will Rogers World Airport in Oklahoma City.

The car had been rented to the NCAA and a Ronald J. Stratten, a member of the NCAA's enforcement staff from Shawnee Mission, Kan.

"We are in the process of taking affidavits now from the person who traced that car," Tyree said.

Stratten was investigating claims that Wright had transported Oklahoma State athletes free of charge.

Wright, who denied transporting any athletes against NCAA rules, has said he plans to sue the NCAA for invasion of privacy and defamation as soon as the NCAA hands down its ruling in the Oklahoma State case.

Oklahoma State is scheduled to have its final hearing before the NCAA council in Atlanta on Jan. 8.

This development occurs while the NCAA is under investigation by Congress and is feeling the heat from its member institutions for its investigatory and disciplinary procedures. The House oversights and investigations subcommittee plans to begin hearings in February to study enforcement procedures used by the NCAA.

Boxing card features top area fighters

Lincoln's area Golden Glovers will open the local boxing season Wednesday night at Pershing Auditorium at 8 p.m. with a championship card sponsored by the Lincoln Association of the Master Barbers.

Five-time Midwest champion Roger Pelster, four-time midwest champion Ray Menefee and two-time Midwest champion Lawrence Cisneros are expected to be matched in bouts along with a full card of 15 three-round fights.

Pre-matched fights include Cisneros, fighting for the Randy Nelsen boxing club against Ben Belmont in a 150-pound bout. Belmont is rated eighth in the recent U.S. amateur rankings.

Roger Debarre, voted most promising boxer at last year's Southeast District championships, will face Mark Clough of the Nelsen club in a 150-pound match and Ron Ware of Omaha is expected to fight defending SE district champ Pat Arthur, who is boxing for the Menefee/Stan's club this season.

"We should have some top matches and this card would be as good as any you'll find in the area," said Master Barbers spokesman Eldro Hansen.

Boxing clubs expected to participate Wednesday night include Nelsen's, Menefee/Stan's, Fremont, Omaha, Columbus, Hastings, Burlington Northern, House of Shears of Lincoln, and the Men's State Reformatory team.

Grambling aerial whiz gets honor

Grambling, La. (AP) — Touchdown passes — even seven in a game — are pretty humdrum to Doug Williams by now, but the big Grambling quarterback still got a thrill out of being named national Back of the Week by the Associated Press.

"I guess I'm the first player from a black college ever to be named," he said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "It's great.

"It's great to be recognized with the big boys. To a lot of people, Grambling and the other black schools are still little guys."

Grambling and three other Southwestern Athletic Conference teams moved up to Division I in the National Collegiate Athletic Association this season. But Williams said that despite the number of professional stars who prepped in SWAC schools, he still feels they are not afforded the recognition due them.

"We don't get the coverage that the traditional big schools get," he said.

Williams was named Back of the Week off his performance Saturday against Langston.

He threw seven touchdown passes in that game, completing 23 of 30 attempts for 378 yards, then sat out the final quarter. His last pass was a 13yarder that gave him a career total of 7,551 yards, an NCAA record. John Reaves of Florida held the previous record with 7,549 yards in his career.

"Nobody's ever done that to us before," said Langston Coach Albert Schaots.

seven weeks, 36 days minimum.

These "blocked weeks" and minimum number of racing days include no Monday racing for any track in the state and offer a minimum of five days racing per week, excepting the opening two weeks and closing two weeks of the Nebraska racing season.

"We agree with this proposal because it offers each track the minimum number of days they feel they need to have to operate successfully and if the individual tracks want more days, they can race on Monday," said Brandt.

One other proposal presented by Warren Whisenand would have Fonner racing 42 days, followed by Lincoln from April 25 to June 3 for 35 days, followed by Ak-Sar-Ben, Columbus and Atokad.

Redskins will appeal ref's ruling

Washington (AP) — The Washington Redskins will file an appeal to the National Football League office over the final two seconds of their game with the Baltimore Colts.

They don't expect to win.

Coach George Allen said Tuesday that the Redskins had gotten the final play started although referee Chuck Heberling ruled Monday night that time had expired before the snap.

With the Redskins out of timeouts, quarterback Joe Theismann completed a 21-yard pass to Frank Grant to the Colts' 13. The officials stopped the clock with two seconds to play to allow the Colts defensive players to get back to the line of scrimmage.

Theismann took the snap from center Len Hauss and completed a 13-yard pass to Calvin Hill for what would have been the tying touchdown. The Redskins lost 10-3.

Allen said, after looking at the films of the game, "When the gun went off and the smoke was in the air, Joe had the ball in his hands. The play should have been allowed."

In ther other match, Lincoln Volleyball Club defeated McCook, 15-12, 5-15, 15-12.

Ali promises Young fight

New York (UPI) — Jimmy Young, who lost a split decision to top-ranked Ken Norton last week, has been promised a title shot by Muhammad Ali next spring, Young's manager Ray Kelly said Tuesday.

"I met with Muhammad Ali and he said to prove he's not ducking anyone and is really the greatest champion of all time, he's gonna give Jimmy another shot at the championship, maybe in March or April, and then take on Norton," Kelly said from his partner Jack Levin's office in Philadelphia.

Brown happy with choice

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

Lance Van Zandt tells his Black Shirts to "take no prisoners" when he wants to exhort his Nebraska defensive charges to an all-out effort.

Kenny Brown lines up on the opposite side of the ball from Coach Van Zandt's troops, but the Cornhusker wingback knows all about taking prisoners.

When Brown attended Elder High School in Cincinnati, Ohio, a fellow Elder teammate and friend, Bud Wilkins, had football recruiting trips lined up with Ohio State and Nebraska.

"He (Wilkins) visited Ohio State and we never saw him again," Brown laughingly recalled Monday. "He never made it to Nebraska. Coach Hayes (Ohio State's irrepressible General Woody) has a way of capturing you and convincing you that's the place to go."

After Brown won prep all-American honors in both football and basketball, grid recruiters from Kentucky and Michigan State came calling along with coaches from Ohio State and Nebraska.

Remembering prison-like capture of his friend, Brown rejected the pleas of Ohio State recruiters to visit the Columbus, Ohio, campus of the Buckeyes.

"There was no way I was going up there and let him (Hayes) get a hold of me," Brown said. "Ohio State doesn't throw the ball very much, so I didn't want to go there.

"I also wanted to get away so I could meet new friends and not always be running home all the time."

Nebraska has a reputation for putting the ball in the air, and Lincoln is certainly a mile or two down the road from Cincinnati, so Brown decided to cast his lot with the Huskers.

He also selected Nebraska because he liked Coach Bill Myles, the man who recruited him. Ironically, Myles left Nebraska last year to go to Ohio State.

"I think Coach Hayes got tired of Coach Myles stealing a lot of the players around the Ohio area," Brown said with a chuckle. "He (Myles) did a good job recruiting back there."

While Brown regrets Myles' leaving Lincoln, he's not disappointed with his decision to attend Nebraska. The Cornhuskers are still throwing the football and Brown has shown he knows how to catch it.

One of his biggest grabs came last Saturday against Missouri. In a bit of razzle-dazzle, quarterback Randy Garcia handed off to I-back Rick Berns, who in turn handed back to Garcia who fired a 37-yard bomb to Brown.

The 6-0, 176-pound Brown flew high to wrestle the ball away from Tiger defender Steve Mally. The sensational third quarter reception was the big play in a 91-yard Husker drive which ended in a Billy Todd field goal as Nebraska went ahead for good in the tight contest, 12-10.

"I had him (Mally) beat on the play but the ball was a little underthrown," Brown recalled. "I had to come back and fight him for it. But I had it all the way."

A sophomore backup to starting wingback Curtis Craig, Brown has proved to be a valuable and versatile performer for the Huskers. In addition to his running and pass receiving, he also returns punts.

This is a comeback year of sorts for Brown. After showing so much promise he made the varsity squad his freshman season in 1975 when he played sparingly, Brown disappeared last year when academic troubles grounded him.

He was redshirted in 1976 while he cleared up troubles with the books. "It was a tough year." Brown and his wife, Donna, are the parents of a 2-year-old daughter, Delinda. "I had some personal problems and not playing, it was tough."

But the wide grin — which is magnified by a beautiful gold tooth in the front of his mouth — he flashes these days, tells you everything is all right with Kenny Brown. "Yeah, I'm pretty happy now," he said.

NWU harriers to meet

Nebraska Wesleyan comes away from a second straight Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference cross country championship to compete Saturday in the NCAA Division III cross country championships. The national meet will again be hosted by Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio.

NWU placed five individuals in the top 10 and won this year's NIAC meet with a conference-record 25 points. Jon Eggers won the individual title, covering the five-mile Seward Country Club course in 25:46, while Bob Carlson (third), Bob Quick (sixth), Larry Bell (seventh) and Dale Bradley (ninth) also finished in the top 10.

"We weren't entirely satisifed, but ran about as good as we were capable," said NWU Coach Woody Greeno. "It was good enough to win, so we were happy for that."

NWU will try to improve on last year's 25th place finish in the national meet in Ohio with nearly the same team that competed there last fall. "We hope to get in the top 20, and if we run good we will," forecasts Greeno. "A year of experience should make a difference, because you can really flounder with so many runners. You've got to be a tough competitor or you'll get lost in the numbers."

The 5-mile race involving over 300 runners will be staged at the Highland Park Golf Course near Cleveland and is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. Saturday. The same seven individuals that competed in Saturday's NIAC meet will leave Thursday morning for the nationals.

Benjamin has lead

Mission, Kan. (UPI) — Guy Benjamin of Stanford, despite throwing four interceptions Saturday against Southern Cal, tightened his hold on the NCAA Division I passing lead this week with a completion percentage of 62.0.

Benjamin has completed 176 of 280 passes for 2,086 yards and 16 touchdowns this season. His .626 completion rate is the highest in the nation.

Doug Williams of Grambling has thrown for more yardage than any quarterback in the country at 2,430 and maintained his lead in Division I total offense this week with an average of 296.7 yards per game.

Earl Campbell of Texas is again the Division I rushing leader with 1,188 yards for an average of 148.5 per game, even though runner-up Terry Miller of Oklahoma State has rolled up more ground yardage than anyone in the country with 1,279.

OSU probation hearing slated

Oklahoma City (AP) — Oklahoma State goes before the National Collegiate Athletic Association Council Jan. 8 in Atlanta, Ga., for the school's final hearing on possible athletic probation.

It had learned that the hearing might allow participation by several Oklahoma state alumni who have been notified by the university that they or their attorneys will be allowed to appear.

Oklahoma State reportedly was on the verge of receiving a two-year probation, a loss of 15 scholarships over a two-year stretch, a ban on television or bowl appearances and punishment for football players Mike Edwards and Jim Clark at a scheduled hearing in Kansas City last month.

But a misunderstanding over who was allowed to appear caused that session to be cancelled.

It has been reported that approximately 28 allegations of rules infractions have been made against the school, most of them allegedly involving alumni.

Vietnamese leaders are almost exclusively communists

By Richard Dudman
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Hue, Vietnam — When the new breed of Vietnamese who are running things throughout South Vietnam speak of their "revolution," they are using the term with precision.

The word often has been used loosely in other countries. Every Latin American banana republic has had its "revolution," but often these have amounted to no more than simple substitutions of one regime for another.

In South Vietnam, as shown again and again during a 17-day tour of the region, there has been a fundamental social upheaval. The men and women of the former communist-led underground are now on top, occupying the positions of power and decision-making in government, industry, education and agricultural planning.

At every opportunity, local government officials and plant managers were asked about their personal backgrounds.

The interviews disclosed a clear pattern. Those in charge were almost invariably members of the Communist Party of Vietnam. Indeed, a question on this point was often greeted with laughter as if it was ridiculous to ask.

Most of those questioned were southerners, born and raised south of the 17th Parallel, which divided North and South Vietnam from 1954 to 1975.

Many had spent the 30 years of war, first against the French and then against the Americans and American-supported South Vietnamese governments, entirely in the south. Often they had led double lives, ostensibly ordinary farmers or city workers but actually key members of the communist underground which still is frequently referred to here as the Viet Cong.

Many others had been "regrouped" to North Vietnam in 1954, when the Geneva agreement gave Vietnamese the option of living either north or south of the partition line.

Editor's note: Richard B. Dudman, Washington Bureau chief of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, is the first American reporter allowed extensive interviews with Vietnamese since the communist victory 2½ years ago. This is the sixth of a series.

Vietnam Revisited

Some of those in higher positions had been to other communist countries, most frequently the Soviet Union, on short visits or sometimes for stays of several years.

Although none of the many authorities made available in the south for interviews was of northern origin. Western diplomats and technicians say that the topmost jobs in the south are usually filled by northerners.

The foreigners seemed to be including the southern-born 1954 "regroupees" when they spoke of northerners, however.

The sampling produced mixed results on the question of the survival rate of "cadres" or key members of the underground army in South Vietnam. Some told of heavy losses among fellow guerrilla fighters whom they knew. Others insisted that it was mostly ordinary people who were killed in the fighting, died in the bomb blasts or were assassinated in the CIA's Phoenix program.

Here in Hue, one of the five deputy chairmen of the 15-member people's committee that governs Binh Tri Thien province said he was born in Hue and had spent 12 years in the underground war here, with another two years in Moscow and a brief trip to Peking.

Le Tu Son, about 50, said he lived in the hills 10 miles from the city during most of the U.S. intervention. He said he slipped into the city sometimes by disguising himself as a peasant for the trip and then changing into city clothes before entering town. He said all 15 members of the committee were natives of the present province, which includes the two northernmost provinces of South Vietnam and the southernmost province of North Vietnam.

On the stately red-stone campus of Hue's senior high school — whose alumni include Ho Chi Minh, northern general Vo Nguyen Giap and Premier Pham Van Dong, as well as the late President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam — the new director is Nguyen Xuan Tu, a native of Hue who was sent here from Hanoi after "liberation" to take the job.

He introduced several teachers who had been teaching at the school for 15 to 25 years. Of the 110 current members of the teaching and administrative staff, 32 had been sent from the north, he said.

Down the coast at Danang, Hoang Minh Hieu, the 58-year-old deputy director of a new teachers' college, said he was born in Danang, fought the French until they withdrew in 1954, went north for a time and walked down the Ho Chi Minh Trail in 1963 to fight the Americans and their "puppets" in his old province.

At Danang's chief hospital, formerly operated by West Germans, the new director, Dr. Le Ngoan, and the new deputy director, Dr. Dao Thien, both worked for 20 years in a guerrilla hospital in the "liberated zone" of the same province, about 25 miles from Danang.

"We had a system of mobile branch hospitals hidden in caves and under the trees," he said. "At night we had to keep the light shaded during emergency operations, and in the daytime we had to be sure no smoke could be seen from the warplanes. We couldn't dry clothes in the sun or the planes would spot us."

A Danang editor, Hoang Tra, 40, said that when peace came he simply moved his old guerrilla weekly into the city and began bringing it out twice a week.

During the war, he said, it had published 300 to 400 copies a week since 1960 on various presses in Danang and outlying villages. "The authorities saw the paper but they never could catch us printing it."

The paper, Quang Nam Danang, now has a circulation of about 10,000 and a staff of 30 reporters that includes correspondents in Hanoi and Saigon. He said the editor-in-chief and the two deputy editors had all worked on the underground paper during the war.

The highest ranking official interviewed in the south was Le Quang Chanh, one of six deputy chairmen of the 15-member people's committee that governs Saigon like a sort of city council. Most of them are Saigonese and veterans of the 30-year war in the south, he said.

Chanh said he, too, had served in the southern underground throughout the war, making frequent trips to Hanoi. He said it took him 10 days each way — three days walking between Saigon and the border and then a week by automobile along the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

Chanh was among those who minimized the losses of cadres during the war. As he put it, "some were killed. They were replaced by others. The American aggressors and the puppet administration could not eliminate all our cadres, and it is a natural law that when you grow old you die and are replaced."

He said the only cadres that had been brought down from the north were experts in various fields such as traffic engineers, public health specialists and professional educators. Of 22,000 teachers in the city, he said 3,000 came from the "liberated zone," were original southerners who had been "regrouped" north in 1954, or were originally from the north.

At a large, modern printing plant in Saigon now run by the government, Ngo Tan Khoi, the director, said he had worked as a printer in Saigon through the war, carrying out secret underground assignments at the same time. His deputy, a native of Can Tho in the delta, had a similar background except that he had spent 25 years in two stretches in the Con Son Island prison.

They said the old plant owners and managers ran away but that most of the 160 wartime employes had stayed on. They were busy printing pineapple juice labels, Air Vietnam tickets, greeting cards for the 1978 Tet holiday, postcards for the Saigon tourist bureau, and huge stacks of a four-color portrait of Lenin for the observation of the Russian Revolution.

Many of the younger persons doing important work under the new government had known no other life than the underground struggle. One consequence is lack of formal education. To remedy this, a night school for workers has been established in each of Saigon's 17 districts.

At one of the schools, 1,000 adult students were observed studying the three Rs and high school subjects such as mathematics, literature, physics, geography and biography. They hold regular daytime jobs and attend the classes for three hours three nights a week. Faculty and staff are volunteers who hold regular daytime teaching jobs.

One young woman, 21, a bakery worker, said she had spent what would have been her school years fighting in the delta. She was taking two elementary grades a year and had reached the third grade.

Next: A Vietnamese war "heroine" and U.S. "war crimes."

Dutch sextuplet dies of infection

Rotterdam, Netherlands (AP) — The youngest and weakest of Holland's sextuplets died in a hospital Tuesday as his parents were moving into a house to accomodate the new family.

Dennis Nijssen succumbed to an intestinal infection in the Sofia Children's Clinic at the age of seven weeks and two days. He underwent surgery a month ago for a perforated intestine and suffered a relapse last Thursday.

His brother and four sisters were reported in good condition at Leiden University Hospital, where they were born Sept. 18. They will be allowed to go home as each becomes strong enough, starting in about two weeks, a hospital spokesman said.

The sextuplets were born to Corrie Nijssen, 27-year-old wife of a steelworker. She had undergone hormone treatment, and thee babies were a month premature.

Dennis' death left one surviving set of sextuplets in the world — three girls and three boys born to Susan Jan Rosenkowitz at Cape Town, South Africa, in January 1974.

Like the Rosenkowitz family, Mrs. Nijssen and her husband Siem, 28, were to have benefitted from tens of thousands of dollars worth of magazine rights and baby product endorsements.

They bought a five-bedroom house in Heemskerk, their hometown northwest of Amsterdam, and began moving last week from their small apartment.

A spokesman for Dutch soccer entrepreneur Cor Coster said he was not sure whether Dennis' death would affect the family's deals, which Coster arranged. He had sold Dutch magazine rights to the family's story for a reported $100,000 and foreign rights for about $80,000. He said he would give the first $60,000 of any proceeds to the family and take a commission only on further earnings.

Russian Communists 'fascist,' Chinese say

London Telegraph

Peking — China gave the Soviet Union a stinging slap in the face for its 60th birthday when the Chinese Communist Party press accused the Russian Communist Party of having turned "fascist."

At the same time China sent a warm congratulatory message to the Russian people on a "state to state" as opposed to "party to party" basis and the Chinese foreign minister attended the Russian national day reception Monday for the first time in years.

China maintains that it has no quarrel with the Russian people but that the "Soviet revisionist renegade clique" led by Leonid Brezhnev has betrayed the 1917 Russian Revolution.

"This clique has changed the proletarian party founded by Lenin into a fascist party of the bureaucrat monopoly bourgeoise," said an editorial carried jointly by the Chinese media.

Russia had turned traitor to international proletarianism, the newspaper said, and become "one of the biggest international exploiters and oppressors in the present era."

But the Russian Communist Party is still putting the best face on things and hoping for some sign of a thaw in Peking's attitude.

The Chinese and Russian flags hung side by side at the Russian embassy in Peking Monday night as Foreign Minister Huang Hua chatted with Ambassador Vasily Olstikov at the national day cocktail party. Some Russians have been privately raising the possibility of another Peking visit soon by Leonid Ilyichev, Russia's chief negotiator in the prolonged Sino-Soviet border talks. His deputy returned to Peking from leave a month ago.

Ilyichev's last trip to Peking 11 months ago failed to produce a breakthrough in the talks.

Miss Lillian's Irish hosts have house 'full of flowers'

Dublin, Ireland (UPI) — President Carter's mother, Miss Lillian, is staying at a 100-year-old Irish home "full of flowers and sunshine" during her 10-day visit with about 250 Iowans on a "friendship Force" visit, organizers of the good-will tour said Tuesday.

Mrs. Carter, 79, avoided a picket line on her departure from Des Moines with the Iowa group, which includes Mrs. Billie Ray, wife of Gov. Robert D. Ray.

A stewardess from Trans International Airlines, on strike for eight weeks, said, "We just don't think it's right that the president's mother is flying on a plane staffed with scabs."

"I don't worry about pickets and things like that," Mrs. Carter said of the strike. "I don't know a thing about it. We don't even have unions in Plains. It's great."

Mrs. Carter is staying with lawyer Tim Ryan, his wife, Noelle, and their three daughters during the visit.

"Friendship Force," a program begun by the White House eight months ago, grew out of a project launched by the Carters four years earlier in Georgia. It arranges visits between average American citizens and their counterparts in foreign countries for home-to-home visits in a family atmosphere.

Mrs. Carter's Irish home is a 100-year-old house in the fashionable Foxrock area, about four miles south of Dublin's city center.

Tony Orlando to perform again

(c) New York Times

The "retirement" of Tony Orlando from the entertainment business is coming to an end after three months. Orlando said in San Francisco that he has recovered from the depression that caused his emotional leave-taking of the Tony Orlando and Dawn group "through therapy, love and a miracle medicine known as Lithium." When Orlando gave up his act last July he was suffering from depression brought on by the death of a retarded sister and his close friend, Freedie Prinze. The Down group, Orlando said, will not perform with him any longer and has struck out on its own.

Astrological Forecast

Aquarius, Libra and Sagittarius persons, according to my personal observations, write the most letters. Gemini would rather talk or take pictures. Libra is the librarian and is at home with art and creative writing. Who writes to you? Odds are that when Cancer writes, food is mentioned at least once. Leo writes of love, and Taurus lets you know about financial status. What do the signs say to you in their letters? The sign of Pisces probably tells you of dreams, prophecies and shoes.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Key is to gather data, to wait and listen, to absorb knowledge. Accent on opposite views, public relations, contracts. Another Aries — and a Libra — figure in picture. Stick to number "9."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New approach to work, service is indicated — might be profitable. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure prominently. Avoid lifting heavy objects. Back is vulnerable. Act accordingly. Love is in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Involvement indicated; it is all or nothing. Accent on emotions, speculative ventures, affairs of heart. Hunch pays dividends. One who taught you in past is willing to do so once again.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Diversify. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Social life accelerates. Be receptive. Look beyond the immediate. Long-range view is essential. You do have to face yourself in the morning.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stick to factual data. Test theories. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio persons figure prominently — so does number "4." Go slow, be thorough. One you "miss" is composing a communication.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be analytical, especially where money is concerned. Find reasons, take nothing for granted. Deal with Gemini, Sagittarius — stick to number "5". Be ready for change, decision affecting possessions, financial status.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Obtain valid hint from Virgo message. Emphasis on pressing your point, insisting on recognition for efforts. Taurus, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Take initiative. Exercise independence of thought, action.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your "mystical" qualities surface. Many are fascinated by your seeming ability to perceive, to know without formal knowledge, to detect subtle clues and signals. Stick to number "7."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Behind-scenes activity could change complexion of external situation. Build, invest, utilize experience, let others know your capabilities. Closed-door conference could result in progress, research.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Finish project, reach beyond current limitations. Friend aids in making valuable contact. Career gets boost. Relationship is intensified. What occurs is serious, for keeps.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make new start. Express what you feel. Deal with Leo. Stick with number "1." Philosophy, spiritual insights are accented. Strive to reach more persons. Travel is indicated.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Follow through on hunch, collect what you need, analyze and evaluate. Cancer individual figures prominently. You have money coming that you may not know about. Celebrate — but there is a tomorrow.

IF NOVEMBER 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are creative, aggressive, dramatic, attractive to opposite sex, inventive, temperamental, talented and enjoying a very productive period. Last year you suffered a serious setback. Now you are back. If single, marriage is on horizon. Married or single, you might go into business. If married, there could be an addition to family. Aries, Libra persons play key roles in your life. You make new start, valuable contacts in November.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Adams without Eve in Lincoln

Watch out for snakes

A friend of mine sent me a picture of Adams and Eve Streets and told me it was in Lincoln somewhere. I drove from 98th Street the entire length of Adams Street but was unable to find this intersection. Can you help?

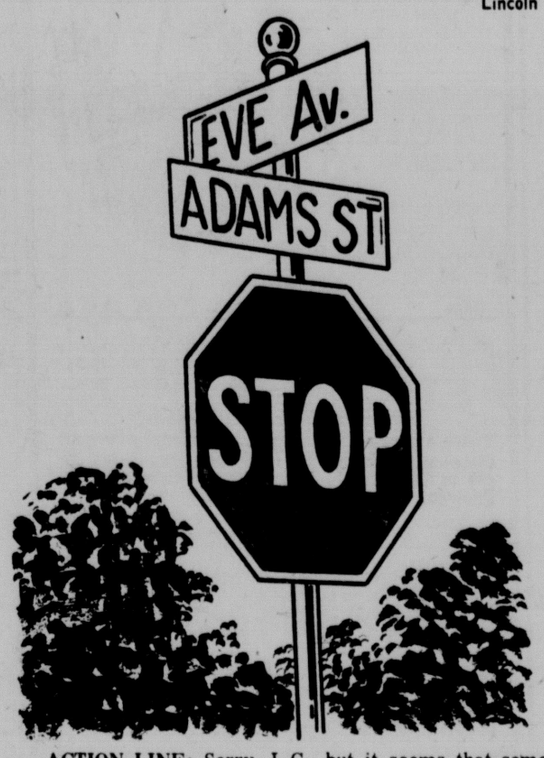
Lincoln



ACTION LINE: Sorry, L.C., but it seems that some snake in the grass has been pulling a fast one. A check with the city traffic engineer's office reveals no Eve Street in Lincoln, especially intersecting Adams. The closest thing to heaven we could find was St. Paul Avenue — another story, and verse, entirely. The picture must have been made in some other city.

Unlaced by tablecloth

I have written Montgomery Ward in Chicago twice about exchanging a lace tablecloth. To date, I have received neither a reply nor the tablecloth. Would you please follow this up for me in case I have to file a claim with the post office.

Mrs. Ray Jensen
Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Don't expect your tablecloth for Sunday dinner, but Montgomery Ward may be able to help. Unfortunately, your letter to us did not specify your order number or the amount of your purchase. Accordingly, Ward's will have to contact the associate buyer mentioned in your last letter to see if your substitute order has been shipped. They will then contact you directly. Keep us posted.

Lost her diary

Please Help! On Nov. 3, 1976, I ordered a diary from the H.K. Brewer Co., in New York. It's the same diary I have been ordering from the company for the past seven years. I have written five letters to the company but have received no reply. Can you get my diary in time to celebrate its first anniversary?

Shauna Valentine
Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The local Better Business Bureau has no record of complaints about H.K. Brewer, but we were unsuccessful in contacting the firm by phone. We suggest you send the firm a certified letter, return receipt requested. If your diary is still not forthcoming, contact the postal authorities about the non-delivery. Good luck.

Action Line Update: Several weeks ago, we contacted the Nebraska Health Care Association about replacement of a geriatrics aide certificate that a reader had lost several years ago. The association checked its records, determined that the reader has passed the course,and was entitled to a certificate. A new certificate has since been signed and sent. Thanks Nebraska Health Care folks.

First step in water plan made

Davenport (UPI) — The Little Blue Natural Resources District and the Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District, known as Tri-County, have agreed to convey 125,000 acre feet of water each year to the NRD.

It is the first major step for transbasin diversion of Platte River water to irrigate 66,500 acres of land in south-central Nebraska.

The NRD tentatively plans to build a 120,000 acre-foot reservoir on the Little Blue River near Campbell to store the water, which will be used to irrigate land in parts of Adams, Kearney, Webster, Clay and Nuckolls counties.

The water Tri-County will convey to the NRD is from winter flows through its hydroelectric - irrigation system. It represents about one-third of the average winter flow.

Water would be delivered thrugh Tri-County's Phelps Canal to a point near Axtell, where the NRD would build a 24-mile canal to carry the water to a reservoir near Campbell.

The agreement, however, hinges on the NRD's receiving the go-ahead to appropriate, store and use the water. The State Water Resources Department would have to grant the approval.

PSC authorizes Gentry Cab Co.

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska Public Service Commission Tuesday authorized Mike Grieger to begin operating his taxicabs in Lincoln just hours after Grieger accused the commission of holding up his application.

The commissiners said there was no correlation between Grieger's charges, made at a morning news conference, and its subsequent action at the PSC's weekly meeting.

Commissioner Harold Simpson of Lincoln said Grieger's accusation that the PSC was showing political favoritism was just not true.

The commission unanimously authorized Grieger to begin operating his taxicabs on a temporary basis Wednesday. Grieger, owner of the Gentry Cab Co., didn't get the schedule of cab rates he wanted, however.

The PSC said Grieger could charge the same rates that Lincoln's other two cab companies, Yellow and Capital, charge. Grieger had asked for a higher rate.

Grieger told reporters he blames his continuing licensing problems for Gentry Limousine Co. and Gentry Cab Co. on an "unorganized and incompetent" commission.

He said he has been trying for more than a year to obtain the PSC's permission to run a limousine service in five counties, including Lancaster County, and to operate a cab company. His limousine service has been operating more than a year.

Grieger contended the PSC has shown "political favoritism" in allowing an Omaha dealer and limousine firm to provide limousine service without receiving permission from the commission.

Although the commission contends it was unaware of the violations until recently, Grieger charged that the alleged illegal services were advertised in telephone directories.

Such service is provided by "unscrupulous operators with cheap, shoddy equipment (who) operate in a haphazard manner," he charged.

Grieger said his investment of more than $100,000 in limousines, cabs, radio equipment and a building has been jeopardized by the PSC's failure to adopt standards for limousine and taxicab companies.

Simpson acknowledged that the PSC didn't know about some of the operations in Omaha until it was brought to the PSC's attention.

However, Simpson explained that the problem occurs because of what he called "a quirk in the law" which allows operators of limousines to provide such services for funeral homes without receiving authorization from the commission. As a result, Simpson explained, an operator of such a service could expand his limousine operations without the knowledge of the commission.

In the case involving the Omaha limousine service, the PSC sent inspectors to Omaha, discovered the operator was in violation of the law and required the operator to receive authorization from the commission, Simpson said.

Simpson added that he told Grieger to tell the PSC staff about other companies which are operating without authorization, but to Simpson's knowlege, Grieger has not filed a complaint, Simpson said.

"We can't operate and check into these things without the facts," Simpson said.

Under Tuesday's action granting Gentry Limousine authority to operate the taxicab service, the PSC granted the same rates charged by Yellow and Capital cab companies. Those rates are 80 cents for the first one-sixth mile and 10 cents for each additional one-sixth of a mile traveled.

Greiger had asked for a 90-cent rate for the first one-sixth of a mile and 10 cents each additional one-sixth of a mile.

Wet Iowa soil slowing harvest

Ames, Iowa (AP) — Soils over much of Iowa, bone-dry last summer, are now so wet that harvest is progressing slower than usual, according to an Iowa State University agriculture specialist.

But the extra moisture may be a blessing for 1978 crops if spring field work can be done on time, says Carren Benson, Extension agronomist at Iowa State.

ABC magnate maintains TV is for entertainment

(c) Newhouse News Service

Hollywood — Fred Silverman, president of ABC entertainment, went after the nation's television critics with both barrels Tuesday, attacking "the notion that TV's primary role is to lift the public to some higher level of aesthetic appreciation."

Silverman, speaking before a friendly audience of top video producers and other executives in Hollywood, told the Radio and Television Society: "At ABC, our primary programming objective is to entertain."

He said he was taking up the cudgels against the TV critics "for the millions of people who enjoy television's most popular programs," and that he wondered whether the people who write about TV were "out of step with the preferences of the American viewers."

"What makes these critics right and 100 million Americans wrong?" he asked.

Silverman's network has become No. 1 in the ratings during the past 18 months on the strength of such series as "Laverne and Shirley", "Happy Days", "Charlies's Angels", "Baretta," and "Starsky and Hutch." He indicated this was no accident.

"We are synchronized," he said. "We are in harmony with the contemporary preferences of an overwhelming majority of the American viewing public. We not only reflect those preferences, we respect those preferences — and often in our programming decisions, we anticipate those preferences."

Silverman's pique apparently was directed particularly at the critical reception for "Soap," ABC's new situation comedy dealing with adultery, homosexuality, nymphomania, murder and various other everyday problems.

"ABC refused to cave in to pressure to scuttle 'Soap' before the public could judge it for itself," he said. "It turned out the public, after seeing the show, agreed with our assessment."

"Soap" for the most of this new season has been leading all the new entries in the Nielsen ratings. However, it slipped a little this past week, to a still respectable 20th place, and a CBS situation comedy, "On Our Own," took over the newcomer top spot in seventh place.

Why Silverman chose this time for his attack on the press is somewhat hard to understand. The "Soap" criticism, while sometimes harsh, actually has served to give that show a gigantic publicity push and certainly was responsible for its initial surge in the ratings.

As for the rest of ABC's new products, the critics generally were kind — with one exception. That was for an hour-long comedy of sorts called "The San Pedro Beach Bums" which got universally rapped. It was, and is, simply awful.

And ABC knows it. "Beach Bums" was preempted Monday night for a Lindsay Wagner special and will be knocked off again next Monday night for "Fist" and "Sugar Time." The end is in sight. The ratings also reflect its coming demise. Last time out, it ranked 56 out of 64, so Silverman's public seems to agree with the critics.

What might be bugging Silverman is the steady ascent of rival CBS to second place. Fred's old network started a poor third this season, but in the last few weeks has shown surprising strength, particularly in its regular offerings.

This week, for instance, ABC snared the top three places, but had to go to 10th for another placement. CBS, meanwhile, landed six of its regular bread-and-butter series in the first 10.

Brendan Byrne returns from the politically dead

Associated Press

Democratic Gov. Brendan Byrne of New Jersey vindicated his stand for a state income tax by coming back from the politically dead Tuesday and winning re-election. Republican John Dalton was elected governor of Virginia to give the parties a split of the two major races.

Meanwhile, Rep. Edward I. Koch was elected mayor of New York.

Byrne, so far behind in the polls six months ago that he considered not running again, trounced state Sen. Raymond H. Bateman, who had said he would let the controversial income tax expire when its mandate runs out next year.

An Associated Press-NBC election day poll indicated that the income tax, considered Byrne's biggest burden, actually helped him win.

In Virginia, Dalton apparently capitalized on his contention that Democrat Henry Howell was too liberal for the basically conservative state. Howell, a friend of President Carter, ran a populist campaign that accused Dalton of being a tool of big business.

But Virginia Democrats did elect a lieutenant governor, Charles "Chuck" Robb, son-in-law of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson. He defeated A. Joe Canada.

Koch, a heavy favorite in New York, defeated Liberal Party nominee Mario Cuomo for the third time this year with Republican Roy Goodman and Conservative Barry Farber trailing far behind. Cuomo, the New York secretary of state, had lost in both the Democratic primary and the runoff.

Carter campaigned for Byrne in New Jersey and Howell in Virginia.

In other races of interest:

—Arthur Eve, a state assemblyman was in a tight race in his bid to become the first black mayor of largely Italian and Polish Buffalo, N.Y.

—Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit was re-elected over Ernest C. Browne. Both men are black.

—Dennis Kucinich, 31, claimed victory in his race for mayor against 30-year-old Edward Feighan in Cleveland's mayoral contest, and Feighan conceded. The winner becomes the youngest mayor ever of a major American city.

—Albert Hofstede, running with the support of Sen. Hubert Humphrey and other major Minnesota politicians, was elected mayor of Minneapolis for the second time, defeating Mayor Charles Stenvig. Stenvig and Hofstede have been playing leapfrog with the mayor's office since 1969.

—Mayor Richard Caliguiri of Pittsburgh, seeking his first full term, was leading over Tom Foerster. Caliguiri was running as an independent; Foerster with Democratic Party support.

—Isabella Cannon, a 73-year-old retired librarian in her first political campaign, was elected mayor of Raleigh, N.C. She upset Mayor Jyles J. Coggins, a wealthy contractor who was unable to campaign in the final weeks because of gall stone surgery.

800 jobs to be moved

Des Moines (UPI) — The Iowa Office for Planning and Programming will assist Sioux City in dealing with problems the city faces because of plans by Zenith Corp. to move 800 electrical assembly jobs from its Sioux City plant to Mexico and Taiwan.

Designers show collections that conform to body shapes

By Bernadine Morris
(c) New York

New York — John Anthony and Calvin Klein are the stars of the moment. Their clothes represent a goal to which other designers aspire. There is nothing complicated or tricky in either of their collections, which simply emphasize beautiful clothes.

Their spring clothes were presented, back-to-back, on Seventh Avenue. By the time they were over, shortly before noon, touchstones for the new season were established. It was clear that clothes must be soft, fluid and supple, flowing gently over the body and taking their shape from it.

The sole exception was a curvy little jacket that Calvin Klein placed over his simple, fluid dresses. He carved it in linen and put it over crepe de chine dresses or separates, and it may be the exception that proves the rule. Or it may be the designer testing the ground for the shape that comes after the current trend has run its course.

But don't be distracted. Calvin Klein's main direction is to gentle, feminine styles that wrap around the body. Jackets are usually so soft they're worn with the sleeves pushed up. Skirts are made with elasticized waistlines. Pullovers, even if they're silk jersey, are as simple as T-shirts and even suede tops are so supple they could be made of glove leather.

The main print is a tiny rose on crepe de chine, but there are graph patterns too. Linen is the dominant fabric, in herringbone patterns for jackets and pants, in handkerchief weights for blouses and in faint jacquard designs. Cotton damask is another favorite, not starched as in tablecloths, but almost as soft as crepe de chine.

For dressing up at night, there is summer satin, in candlelight of facepower tones, in the same simple shapes as the daytime clothes, only perhaps barer. There is no law against wearing a satin camisole with linen pants during the day even though you're going to wear it with a satin skirt at night.

Klein, who once was known for his sharply tailored clothes, has completed the transition to softly flowing styles. The fabrics are so luxurious they're sybartic, the clothes so simple no one will say, "Look at that dress she's wearing." They will simply notice that she looks marvelous.

John Anthony attributes the success of his simple, unconstructed collection to the acquisition of some new machines that help eliminate bindings, hems, linings and anything that adds bulk to clothes. Occasionally, there's a tiny ruffle at the neckline, or a skirt in many tiers. But for the most part, his clothes are made in a single layer of unadorned fabric.

A knitted top can contrast with the smooth texture of a skirt, a sash can give another dimension to a dress by making it blouse, and even coats have an air of delicacy. The colors are faint, in the gray to rose area, with occasional cream or medium brown tones. Needless to say, everything can go with everything else.

The two collections represent American fashion at its very best, but there are other good things going on in the garment center.

Albert Caprano showed a collection that was swingy and upbeat and definitely in the mainstream. Sports clothes, colored in the khaki family, included shorts and raincoats. Dresses tended to be shaped loosely, sporting cape-like tops and little ruffles. Some were a veritable flower garden of prints. Sequins were sprinkled over the pale chiffon evening dresses, perhaps too liberally, but Capraro obviously has a firm grasp on all the categories of apparel that make up fashion today.

Adri Steckling — she only uses her first name professionally — made her debut as the designer for Jerry Silverman Sport before a packed house Monday afternoon. She has a lot of fans who have followed her career as a designer of soft sportswear before it occupied fashion's center stage, and obviously they wished her well.

She's working today with eyelet embroidered flounced skirts, nubby sweaters, pants cut on the bias and very soft blazer jackets.

She fits right into the fashion picture.

Youngsters get sprayed

Englewood, Colo. (UPI) — The color was orange, but Bill Barber saw red when he caught two youngsters spray-painting a message on his warehouse loading dock last weekend.

"My first thought was I'd just make them scrub it off," he said. "But then I thought, I'll teach them a lesson they won't forget."

Barber, 41, captured the two youngsters, who were writing the words "Billy and Donna" across the dock, and gave them a dose of their own medicine — he sprayed them with their own paint.

"I started at the top and worked down to their shoes," Barber said. "The whole thing only took about 30 seconds. They were basically scared to death, but I figured they'd never do anything like that again."

The two boys, Billy Mitchell, 8, and Landry Austin, 9, sporting their new orange color, ran home to their parents. It wasn't long before Barber met them.

"They were mad as heck," the businessman said. "They were going to have me arrested for everything from child abuse to assault."

The parents called the Arapahoe County sheriff's office and a deputy — at their insistence — issued harassment charges against Barber. He was ordered to appear in court Dec. 5.

Barber, a father of three, said his attorney has advised him to file juvenile delinquency charges against the two boys.

"I regret that this has turned out this way because I think the boys have already been punished enough," Barber said.

"But, you know, there's just no respect for private property anymore, and parents can't be counted on to take responsibility for their kids' actions."
